THE CABOT CREOSOTE SHINGLE STAINS

These stains produce that soft, artistic coloring effect so well adapted to houses of modern style of architecture on which shingles are largely used. It may be of interest to know that Mr. A. R. Emerson of Boston, who is preeminent among Eastern architects for the beauty of his seaside and suburban work, is specifying these stains on all his work. They give effects that can be gotten no other way and blend harmoniously with the landscape, while they are durable and preserve the wood, costing only half the price of lead and oil. For sale in lots to suit.

The Advance Threshing Machinery.

The best and fastest thresher in America, and a machine that stands without a rival. The ADVANCE Thresher has NEVER been REPLACED by any other machine on the Coast, but has replaced several others that HAVE FAILED to fill WARRANTEE. Why get some OLD STYLE machine because it is cheap when you can get an ADVANCE on the start and do good work in any kind of grain. You do not have to cut and try with the ADVANCE, but start your power, then commence threshing at once. I take the liberty of referring you to the following parties owning ADVANCE Threshers (without their knowledge): Dr. H. A. Davis, Harrisburg, after wasting most of the season trying to run a cheap machine, bought an ADVANCE and averaged 2206 bushels per day. M. F. White & Co., Dixie, same experience, but after getting an ADVANCE averaged 2046 bushels per day. Knox Bros., Albany, with a little 28-inch machine averaged 1650½ bushels per day. Henry T. Bold, Spangle, writes, after trying a ——— machine the best part of the season bought an ADVANCE. Was then able to run without a blacksmith and carpenter shop. The ENGINE is guaranteed to pull more than any other, and will outtravel all others on the road. If you hear any loud boasts, please tell the parties the ADVANCE THRESHER and ENGINE are sold on their merits entirely. And I am willing to prove all I claim in any field at any time. Do not be humbugged by buying any machine until you see the ADVANCE. I also handle steam fitting goods iron pipe, laundry machinery and many other specialties. Send for catalogue of what you want.

THE DAY AT SEATTLE

Idlers To Be Put to Work, Clearing Up the Ruins.

MANY VISITORS IN THE CITY

Merchants Preparing to Resume Business in Tents.

WILL THE SAFES STAND THE TEST?

The Work of Feeding the Homeless Thousands—A Few Embers Are Blazing Brightly—Hope's Star Is Still Shining.

SEATTLE, June 9.—Everybody will be put to work in the morning, clearing up the burnt district, and those who are idle and will not work will be required to leave the city. There will be no free lunch for the bums after to-morrow.

The race-track saloon and grounds, which has always been a resort for the worst characters of the city, is filled with harlots, thugs and thieves, and the police are keeping an eye on them. All the disreputable houses were burned down, and an attempt will be made to prevent the settlements of the harlots in any other part of the city.

David Wilson, the Tacoma capitalist, who is chairman of the Tacoma relief committee, has two large tents in fine working order, at which fully 3000 people got their meals to-day. Everything has been reduced to a system, and with scores of cooks and waiters the feeding of the people is as regular and systematic as clock-work. To-morrow the Tacoma relief committee will be relieved by another squad of business men from that city, and the work of preparing meals gratuitously for the stricken people will go ahead for probably two weeks longer, or until the Seattleites can get on their feet again. The provisions sent here, and the lunch tents erected, are a Godsend, as but two restaurants were left in the city, and they are small establishments.

Upwards of 2500 people arrived here to-day from Tacoma, Olympia, Port Blakeley, Port Townsend, Port Madison and points on the lower Sound.

The work of blowing down the dangerous walls and opening the safes goes on. To-day the walls of the Occidental hotel were toppled over into the street, smashing what was left of the cable line turntable.

Five steamer loads of people arrived from Tacoma alone, to visit relatives and friends. Many of them were the wives and sweethearts of the Tacoma guard, the members of which are still on duty here, and have done effective service in patrolling the streets.

Henry Villard and party arrived in the afternoon, on a special train from Tacoma.

To-morrow all the safes not heretofore touched will be dug out of the ruins and opened. It will be a crucial test for one or two companies that have been flooding the Northwestern country with alleged fireproof safes. Some of the firms are apprehensive that but little of their valuables will be left when the doors are swung open.

A dispatch was received by the Tacoma relief committee to-night that the steamer Fair Haven would make its first regular trip to Bellingham bay from Tacoma at 7 o'clock Monday morning, and would stop at Seattle with another boat load of provisions for the sufferers, the gift of Nelson Bennett, president of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce. This steamer made a trial trip down the sound a few days ago with Bennett's relatives and friends aboard. The morning after the fire the steamer stopped at Port Townsend and first heard of the calamity. In less than two hours Mr. Bennett, who was on board, succeeded in raising $25,000, and stocking the boat with provisions, started for Seattle, arriving there in the afternoon. Its first freight was for charity, and now on its first regular trip it is again loaded for charity.

News has been received that the thriving little town of Centralia, in Lewis county, has subscribed $300 for the relief fund.

Honorable Elwood Evans, of Tacoma, had the manuscript of his history of Oregon and Washington territory in Bowman's printing office, but an hour or two before the fire he stopped in to see about some proof-reading, and took took all the manuscript away with him, except the first chapter, which was burned up with Bowman's office.

It has been suggested that the Northern Pacific and Columbia & Puget Sound railroad companies should run trains every hour between Seattle and Tacoma, for the accommodation of people who want to pass between the two cities, as all the boats are uncomfortably crowded. At Tacoma to-day hundreds were unable to reach Seattle in consequence of want of transportation.

Relief is pouring in from all quarters.

The clerks of Seattle, which formed one inconsiderable part of the population, are in despair. Many of them lost all they had but the clothes on their back, and are out of employment. Some of them have, through false pride, gone hungry rather than eat at the free meal tents.

The fire has wiped out all differences between the railroad companies over the terminal warehouses and the narrow guage strip. An agreement has been made, setting forth fully the rights of the parties as to the whole controversy, signed by Manager Nadeau, of the Puget Sound Shore, and Manager McNeill, of the Columbia & Puget Sound. Under the terms of this agreement, the Puget Sound Shore Railroad Company is now in possession, subject to certain rights which the Columbia & Puget Sound Railroad Company have. The last clause of the agreement reads as follows:

> It is understood that this settlement shall begin at once upon the signing of this memorandum of agreement and that the necessary legal instruments to confer all rights above provided for shall be drawn and formally executed by the companies at the earliest practical date. The pending suits shall be discontinued, and the restraining orders vacated.

Hundreds of freight cars will be arriving in the city in a few days, and unless a roadway is made through South Third street to the railroad, the freight cannot be gotten out. Henry Villard offered to furnish funds to do this work, and it will probably be done to-day. He said he would do all in his power with the different railroads of the country to the end that Seattle should have very low transportation facilities.

THE WORST IS OVER.

Active Preparations for the Resumption of Business.

SEATTLE W. T., June 9.—To-day has been unusually warm. Everything has now quieted down, and everybody is busy getting ready to start in business in temporary quarters.

The committee appointed has replatted the burnt district, and will submit their report to the meeting of the city council and citizens to-morrow. The new platting provides for running Front and Second streets out to the water's edge, and Commercial to a junction with Front street. The new width of the streets is to be ninety feet, with thirty-four foot alleys. This platting meets with the approval of all property-owners.

The same military patrol is being kept up and will be enforced for several days. No trouble of any kind in the city has been reported, and everything so far has been quiet. Large crowds of people from the Sound towns have been viewing the ruins to-day.

The fire has entirely burned out, with the exception of half a dozen places, where the smouldering heaps are still blazing brightly.

Most of the day has been spent in recovering safes from the ruins and opening them. The safe of Toklas, Singerman & Co. and its contents were found to be totally destroyed.

Carpenters and workmen have been busy all day, in putting up temporary tents for business houses along Second street. Lawns and gardens are turned into places of business, and by the end of the week the major portion of Second street ruins will be re-covered with tents and business places.

The same great confidence and cheerfulness is everywhere manifested, and the business men speak cheerfully of the future. Excavations have already been commenced for new brick buildings, and as soon as the new plat of the business streets is adopted, the erection of buildings will be commenced at once.

The work of blowing down walls standing is going on slowly to-night, but will be finished to-morrow evening. Large gangs of men will be put to work in the morning, clearing up the ruins, and this will give work to all the men who are now wandering about the city in idleness.

The relief committees have provided for all who need assistance, and to-day fed a large number. The number is decreasing some, however, and there is no longer any need for suffering. Telegrams containing money and offers of assistance still continue to pour in. The worst is over now and with what is offered and now on hand, it is thought the wants will be supplied.

Mayor Moran has issued a proclamation to all citizens having goods in their possession belonging to unknown owners to return the same to the committee at the armory. Failing to do so by to-morrow evening will be treated as stealing, and the offenders promptly punished.

The Front street road announces that it will commence running again on Tuesday.

The insurance adjusters are rapidly accomplishing the adjustment of losses and are paying insurance. The remarkable confidence of the heaviest losers for the future has been contagious, and there is very little discouragement expressed in the city.

The Oregon Improvement Company has commenced the work of repairing their docks and coal bunkers, and have men and pile-drivers now at work upon them. They expect to be ready for business again inside of three weeks.

A riot was reported to be in progress among the prostitutes and roughs camped at the race track this afternoon. The sheriff and deputies went out, but the riot proved to have been a drunken row in which no one was seriously injured.

Henry Villard returned this afternoon, and will probably take part in the citizens' meeting to-morrow.

The estimated loss remains the same as reported, $15,000,000.

OPINION OF A SEATTLE MAN.

The Loss Is Not the Calamity That It Might Appear.

CHICAGO, June 9.—D. H. Gilman, a prominent railroad man of Seattle, who arrived in Chicago to-day, left Seattle the day before the big fire; but he says from his knowledge of the city, the loss will prove Seattle's benefit.

"The part of this city burned," he says, "is confined wholly to the business district. It consisted of many fine large buildings, but in nearly every case these structures are surrounded by blocks of wooden buildings, a loss which, knowing that they will be replaced by larger and more substantial ones, a compensation for the more expensive structures destroyed. The fire did not reach that portion where its progress would have left destitution—the residence district—and I do not believe there will be any call for general assistance. The governor of the territory has asked for contributions from those in the territory, and I think that, with what will be voluntarily voted, will alleviate any actual wants. The buildings were mainly owned by those well able to sustain the loss. Most of the owners are old residents, and many of them millionaires. I believe it is a fact that the property was generally mortgaged and altogether, although the loss will probably be between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, it is not the calamity that it might appear."

RELIEF MEASURES.

A Generous Contribution From Chehalis—Dayton also Assists.

CHEHALIS, W. T., June 9.—Citizens here raised $469 for the Seattle sufferers. The meeting unanimously requested the council to appropriate $250, which it will do Monday morning. The Boulon Comedy Company donated the net proceeds of Saturday night's entertainment, amounting to $74, making a total of $793 that Chehalis sends Seattle.

Mayor Berry notified Mayor Moran, asking which was wanted; money or provisions, and received the following from J. R. Lewis, chairman of the relief committee: "Accept our warmest thanks for your liberal aid. We can use money to the best advantage." The cash will be sent them Monday.

FOR JOHNSTOWN AND SEATTLE.

SAN JOSE, June 9.—At a citizen's mass meeting, $2180 was raised for relief of the Johnstown sufferers, in addition to $1100 raised yesterday. Of the funds raised here, 70 per cent. will be sent to Johnstown and 30 per cent. to Seattle.

AT DAYTON.

DAYTON, W. T., June 9.—Excitement here over the Seattle disaster is intense, and sympathy is great. Two hundred dollars was collected within half an hour. The fire is the only subject talked of.

THE MONTANA MEDICAL LAW.

A Belief That Its Unconstitutionality Will Be Established.

BUTTE, M. T., June 9.—Judge De Wolfe overruled the demurrer in the case of Drs. Weyerhorst, Schultz, Beale and Harding, charged with violation of the new medical law. The chief ground of the demurrer was the unconstitutionality of the law. The judge said that he was constrained to overrule the demurrer solely on the decision in the case of Dent against the state of West Virginia, decided in the supreme court of the United States. The judge stated that the medical bill contained many provisions not at all in consonance with the principles of equity or justice.

This decision leaves the case now for trial by jury, and it will probably be disposed of this term. In the event of conviction, an appeal to the supreme court will certainly be taken. Counsel for the doctors are confident the bill will be held to be arbitrary and in violation of the constitution. Meanwhile the quartette of medical men are carrying on business at the old stand.

THE FORGER WHITE.

He Is Wanted in Montana for Crimes Similar to That Played in Seattle.

HELENA, Mont., June 9.—White, the confidence man, under arrest at Seattle for forgery, will have to serve a long term in the penitentiary for his many misdeeds, and White is badly wanted in many places, and in no place worse than Helena. He is the individual who last January swindled the First National bank of a considerable sum of money by means of a forged draft and a bogus speculation in real estate. He is also wanted at Butte, and since his nefarious transactions in Montana there has been a standing reward for his apprehension, but despite the efforts of the shrewdest detectives in the country he managed to escape until apprehended by the authorities at Snohomish.

Take the Northern Pacific Railroad, the dining-car route for all points East. Office, No. 121 First street, corner Washington.

JOHNSTOWN SCENES.

A Quiet Sunday in the Valley of Death,

THOUGH WORK WAS NOT ABATED

A Large Number of Bodies Recovered During the Day.

THE HEALTH OF THE CITY IS GOOD

Relief Funds Will Not Be Used to Clear the Streets and Drifts—The Loss of Life Will Not Exceed 5000.

JOHNSTOWN, June 9.—To-day is the tenth since the disaster in the Conemaugh valley occurred, and the extent of the fatality can be appreciated when it is known that bodies are still being found wherever men are at work. To-day one of the morgue directors was met and asked the usual question:

"How many bodies were recovered to-day?"

"Oh, not very many," he replied; "there were fifty-eight altogether."

The loss of life has been so great that forty bodies found in one day, even if that was the tenth, was considered a light showing. The remains that are now being removed from the drift are far advanced in decomposition, and the physicians in charge are advocating their cremation as fast as found, as it is almost impossible to hold them safely.

The work of clearing away the debris is progressing very encouragingly. The workmen were not required to proceed to-day, but nine-tenths of them volunteered to continue. As a result, a large inroad was made on the drift in the central portion of the city.

Main street, which was the principal thoroughfare, and one vast blockade, is now about cleared.

At the wreckage above the stone bridge, work is going on rather slowly. The force is small, and the difficulties great. Mr. Arthur Kirk, who has been using dynamite blasts to separate the drift, suspended operations to-day. A considerable force continued to use pike poles, and cleared a few feet more.

Ex-Internal Revenue Collector Bigler, of the Western Pennsylvania district, said to-day to an Associated Press reporter, that if he were given permission he could bring in 200 practical cant hook men from the Clearfield lumber districts, and clear the channel above the bridge in two days. The trouble with those at work, he says, is inexperience. He mentioned the matter to Adjutant-General Hastings, but did not meet with very much encouragement.

A QUIET DAY.

This has been a very quiet day in and about Johnstown, owing to the fact that the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio roads refused to run trains from Pittsburg or other important points, nearer than Bolivar on the former, and Rockwood on the latter road. This rule kept out a large influx of excursionists, and left the field clear to the workers.

Religious services were held at various points to-day. Most suburban towns, where church buildings remain had regular services. In Johnstown open air meetings were held at different points.

This has been the hottest day since the disaster, and the weather is telling on the workmen. With the fires that are constantly kept going, burning up the rubbish, and the hot sun, many of them were exhausted before evening. The hot sun beating down on the wreckage above the bridge has developed the fact that many bodies of animals and probably human beings, are yet in the ruins. The stench arising from this pile has been more offensive to-day than at any time yet.

Governor Beaver arrived this morning about 4 o'clock. He spent the day visiting the ruined portions of the city and in driving up the Conemaugh valley. He held a conference this afternoon with committees heretofore in charge, and as a result will assume control on Wednesday morning.

The Western Union Telegraph Company is pushing forward its lines, and to-morrow will open an office in the Morrill building in Johnstown. The Associated Press will also secure quarters in the city proper to-morrow, and the whole newspaper force will then be transferred from the west side of the railroad bridge into what was the business portion of Johnstown.

THE HEALTH IS GOOD.

The health of the valley is unusually good, notwithstanding the reports of a threatened epidemic. The following bulletin has been issued by the state board of health, and speaks for itself. It was posted to-day in a very conspicuous place. The bulletin reads:

HEALTH BULLETIN.

> The general condition of health in Johnstown and vicinity is excellent. No epidemic disease of any kind prevails; nor is it expected that any will arise. The whole region has been divided into districts, and each placed under a competent sanitarian. The state board of health is prepared to meet all emergencies as they arise. The air is wholesome, and the water generally pure. If the good people of the devasted district will go on, as they have so nobly done for the past week, in their efforts to clear up the wreckage, good health will certainly be maintained.
> GEORGE G. GROFF.

Dr. Groff says the valley has been swept so clean by the great floods, and that the river waters are purer than before the disaster. There is a difference in the contaminating power of decomposing organic matter; bodies that have died of contagious disease would be far more dangerous than from bodies in the river, generally covered by from one to six feet of mud and sand. This earthy matter absorbs all the effluvia, and acts as the best of disinfectants. There is no present danger to the water supply of Pittsburg. At Johnstown the only present danger is from the people being frightened into sickness by sensational reports.

RELIEF SOCIETIES.

The Noble Work That Is Being Done by Self-Sacrificing Women.

Dr. John S. Miller and Dr. F. M. Strouse are in charge of the Red Cross corps, which is located in the very midst of the ruins. The flag of the Red Cross, on the white field of tents, waving upon the main tent, is a welcome sign of refuge to many workmen who are suddenly stricken while at work on the ruins.

Several cases of vandalism and robbery were reported to-day. Last night a number of cars containing supplies were broken into and the contents carried off. What the thieves could not steal they trampled and ruined. The Masonic relief car was also entered and robbed. Twelve men were arrested for stealing to-day, but were released upon returning the goods. The military guards, over in Cambria City, were kept busy last night arresting thieves.

Miss Walk and Miss Ely, of the Northern Home for the Friendless for children, returned to Philadelphia yesterday and took with them the Hoffman family of nine children. These little ones were found in an utterly destitute condition, as both parents and the oldest sister were drowned in the flood. The ladies will return to assist in the work of aiding the children who have lost all.

Miss Hinckley, head of the Children's Aid Society of Philadelphia, at the headquarters near the Fourth ward morgue, is one of the busiest young women in the valley. The applications for children far exceeds the number of children thus far provided for.

Miss Hinckley says the object of her society is to unite parents and children rather than send them away from Johnstown, although the little ones will be provided for if their parents are not found. There are plenty of Johnstown people who will adopt these children and bring them up as citizens of Johnstown, instead of sending them to asylums. Miss Maggie Brooks, the only resident member of this aid society who was not drowned, is a school teacher here, and knows every child and its parents in the city. She spends her time in hunting every house for miles around for parents and children. When a child is found, it is sent to headquarters and a note and description made of it. When any of the child's relatives or parents are found, they are sent to headquarters, and in this way many families have been reunited.

The object of the Western Pennsylvania Society is to furnish temporary as well as permanent homes for orphans.

Mrs. Alston to-day found at Kernville seventeen adults and children living in a room about 10x15. The children will be sent to Pittsburg until the parents can find some sort of habitation, when they will recall their children.

Numerous cases of overcrowding were found at Kernville, and bad results are feared.

THE DEATH LOSS.

The Number Is Now Placed at Five Thousand.

The work of registration of the survivors of the flood is going steadily on. Up to this evening there were about 21,000 registered, and the list is still increasing.

The number lost is placed now at 6000, by those who held it would reach 10,000 a week ago. A conservative estimate is between 3500 and 4000. Up to date there have been 1500 bodies recovered.

The tower of St. John's Roman Catholic church was blown up by dynamite this afternoon. This is the church which caught fire on the eventful Friday night and burned. The tower stood alone, and was a constant menace to passersby. It was condemned, and danger signals placed near it, but as a measure of safety the authorities ordered that it be demolished.

William Furguson walked down from South Fork to-day, following the line of the Pennsylvania road. He said all the railroad from South Fork to the viaduct was swept away. The old portage viaduct is gone; part of the road known as the Deep Cut is half filled with earth, and the tracks are lost for a mile and a half. The tracks from Mineral Point to the Cut are lost. Trestle work is being built where the Deep Cut bridge once stood. From the viaduct to South Fork, he said, was six miles. It will be three weeks before the road is open for travel, and months before it will be restored to its former stability.

THE RELIEF FUND.

Every Dollar Will Be Applied to the Needs of the Sufferers.

An important meeting was held here this afternoon, at which Governor Beaver, Adjutant-General Hastings and others were present. A general discussion of the situation was had. Chairman McCreery of the relief committee, said he thought it was time the relief committee was relieved of the work of clearing away the debris by the state. The governor said all necessary money could be raised; that there were 200 men who would become responsible for $5000 each; that he would give his bond to the state treasurer for $1,000,000, with those 200 men as bondsmen, and the state treasurer would then pay out $1,000,000 for the necessary work. When the legislature met, the money withdrawn from the treasury could be appropriated. He said the money already subscribed should be used entirely for the relief of the sufferers, and the money from the state treasury should be used for restoring the vicinity to its condition before the flood. All debts already contracted for the removal of debris should be paid, but all money paid out for this purpose from the relief fund shall be refunded, so that every cent subscribed for the relief of the stricken people shall be used for that purpose alone.

The governor has $250,000 in his hands now for the relief fund.

A committee of seven well-known men of the state will be appointed to distribute the relief fund, and the present relief committee is to continue until the commission is appointed.

In an interview to-night, Governor Beaver said: "Funds which have come into my hands from so many quarters outside of the state, and which have been imposed upon me as a sacred trust, will be expended wholly and absolutely for the benefit of individual sufferers. No part of it will be expended in the work which is legitimately the domain of the state under its police powers."

AN INQUEST NECESSARY.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 9.—The coroner of this county has returned inquisitions on the bodies of 218 victims of the Johnstown flood. The verdict in each case was that deceased came to his death by violence, due to the flood, caused by the breaking of the dam of the South Fork reservoir, and that there is such strong suspicion of such violence, or other unlawful acts, as to make an inquest necessary.

BODIES FOUND IN THE OHIO.

LOUISVILLE, June 9.—Two floaters were caught in the river at Warsaw, Ky., yesterday, supposed to be from Johnstown. The bodies of animals are also seen passing.

SABIN SUING FOR DIVORCE.

Sad Downfall of His Wife, From the Use of Morphine and Liquor.

ST. PAUL, June 9.—The Pioneer-Press will say to-morrow, that ex-Senator D. M. Sabin has entered proceedings for divorce against his wife, for excessive use of morphine and intoxicating liquors.

A SAD STORY.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 9.—With reference to the divorce suit brought by ex-United States Senator Sabin against his wife, a local paper says: The preliminary papers were filed in Flushing, Long Island, some weeks ago but the complaint was not deposited in court. Divorce is sought on grounds of drunkenness, which charge will doubtless shock society at Washington, but which does not compare in notoriety with others which have been whispered here for some time. During an invalid period some time ago Mrs. Sabin is said to have become a victim to the morphine habit. At the close of Sabin's senatorial career she was, at her own request, placed in a private insane asylum at Flushing, where she is now.

Defendant was one of the most fascinating members of society in which she moved. She was an adopted daughter of a prominent physician of Danielsonville, N. Y., and was married twenty years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Sabin have no children of their own, but have adopted three.

THE CHARLESTON'S FAILURE.

The Fault is With the Designs, Not the Building.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The naval officers who had charge of the trial trip of the new cruiser Charleston, state that the difficulties encountered are the same as those experienced by the English builders of the Maniwa Kan, a Japanese man-of-war, and the prototype of the vessel just completed. The designer of the Maniwa Kan recently read a paper before the Engineering Association in England, in which he recounted the troubles that had to be overcome before the vessel was accepted by the Japanese government. All went nicely so long as an ordinary rate of speed was maintained, but as soon as any effort was made to increase the rate, difficulties began. The designers did not mention these facts when they sold the plans for the Charleston to Whitney.

It is now evident that even if the vessel were properly constructed and adjusted in accordance with the plans submitted to the builders, the Charleston could not yield the results required unless radical alterations were made. The trouble is therefore with the designs, not with the builders.

Naval officers will profit by the paper read in England by the designers, and doubtless the changes as suggested will be made in the vessel.

THE CHURCH OF ROME

Cardinal Gibbons Will Not Fill St. Peter's Chair.

THE BRUNO STATUE UNVEILED.

The Pope Prostrated From Brooding Over the Event—Archbishop Riordan Waging a War Upon Asceticism.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—The dispatch announcing that Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, was likely to be elected pope upon the death of Leo XIII. has caused some talk here. On this subject Father Fasanotti is quoted as saying: "There is no foundation whatever for reports such as have been telegraphed. The present state of affairs in Rome would oblige the college of cardinals to elect an Italian pope should the present pontiff die. The government of Italy, since it took away the pope's temporal dominions, has displayed an aggressive spirit toward the papacy. Were a foreigner elected pope, the government would look with increased suspicion on the holy see. But the election of an Italian, on the contrary, does much toward pacifying the strained relations between the church and state. The political opponents of the holy see in Italy will naturally be more inclined to look with favor on a pontiff who is one of their own countrymen, than upon a foreigner. Cardinal Gibbons is eminent for his ability and virtues in Rome, as well as in this country. But the peculiar political condition of the papacy at present forbids the election of other than an Italian to the chair of Peter."

THE BRUNO STATUE UNVEILED.

Thirty Thousand People March Through the Streets of Rome.

ROME, June 9.—The statue of Bruno was unveiled to-day with imposing ceremonies. Thirty thousand persons, including students and deputations from various parts of Italy, marched in a procession through the principal streets. The removal of the canvass covering of the statue was the signal for deafening cheers. The ceremonies were witnessed by the syndic of Rome, government officials and a large number of senators and deputies.

Deputy Bovio, in an oration eulogized the martyr, and declared that to-day there was born a religion of free thought and liberty of conscience, which would be worse for papacy than the loss of temporal power. The proceedings throughout were orderly.

The memory of Garibaldi was honored with imposing ceremony to-day.

WEDDED TO THEIR CLOISTERS.

An Unpleasant Contest Between Archbishop Riordan and a Body of Ascetics.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—A meeting was held at the Presentation convent yesterday, for the purpose of electing a superior general of the Presentation order in California. There were present over 100 members of the sisterhood. Archbishop Riordan explained the object of the meeting of the assembled nuns, and then directed that the election should be proceeded with. Four ballots were cast, but no decision was reached, and probably thinking that no one of their number would be selected for the new office by the Sisters, the archbishop appointed Rev. Mother Josephine, superioress of the Berkeley convent, as superior general of the Presentation order in California.

The step taken by the archbishop is thought by the nuns to be only the first toward dissolution of the established rules and customs of their order. The matter is said to be a painful one to them, as they fear to lose the retreats of their cloisters, which, it is anticipated, will be the result of the powers and authority conferred upon the archbishop.

Archbishop Riordan says that the nuns of the Presentation convent should break their cloister and go out into the world to teach Sunday schools in the different churches of the city, and to perform other duties. The nuns, some of whom have not seen the light of day, except from inside the walls of their inclosure for a quarter of a century, differ from their superior and are anxious to continue the existence of their order in this province as it has been for over thirty years past—a cloistered sisterhood. The result is an unpleasantness which has arisen between the archbishop and the Sisters. It is only since the archbishop's return from Rome that he has announced his intention of breaking the cloisters, and it is said that while at the Vatican, he was endowed by the pope with power sufficient for that purpose.

The Pope Greatly Depressed.

ROME, June 9.—The pope is much depressed. It is reported that he refuses to see anybody, and he has passed three days absorbed in prayer in his private chapel. Four hundred telegrams have arrived at the Vatican, deploring unveiling of the Bruno monument. All the ambassadors accredited to the Vatican met this evening in the pope's chapel.

King Humbert has congratulated his ministers on the absence of disorder.

RICE'S SUCCESSOR.

General L. S. Brice Will Probably Edit the "North American Review."

PARIS, June 9.—What is considered a pretty good statement is made on good authority, that General Lloyd S. Brice, of New York, will succeed the late Allen Thorndyke Rice as editor of the North American Review. General Brice, who is here, when asked if he were to fill the vacancy left by the death of Rice, said:

"I am not prepared to make any positive statements in regard to the matter. I heard that it has been published in New York that I was to assume the editorship of the North American Review, but I cannot say whether I shall or shall not. Rice made a will in London in 1881, which was in possession of his sister here in Paris at the time of his death. I believe it contains something about my taking charge of the Review. Rice frequently said to me that of all his friends he would like me to take charge of the Review in case anything should happen to him. Should I assume the editorship of the magazine, I will endeavor to carry out Rice's method as nearly as possible. If there is no will or codicil later than the one of 1881, it is probable that I shall be Rice's successor."

GAMBLING AT MONACO.

Another Large Room To Be Built, to Accommodate the Rush.

LONDON, June 9.—Stockholders and others interested in the Monte Carlo gambling rooms are in a state of unusual glee over the season which has just closed. It has been so profitable that the large gambling rooms have been insufficient to accommodate the crowds. The governor of Monaco has just announced in a letter that a new gambling room is to be erected at a cost of 1,000,000 francs, and says, incidentally, that the profits of three months of the winter season, after all expenses have been paid, exceed twenty times that amount.

A HITCH ABOUT SAMOA.

The Washington Government Still Withholds Its Approval.

LONDON, June 9.—The Berlin correspondent of the Times says: "There is good reason to believe that the Washington government does not altogether approve the Samoan agreement, especially in regard to foreign control in Samoa. There is no doubt that a hitch has arisen. Apparently there is a divergence of opinion regarding the punishment of Mataafa."

The Standard's Berlin correspondent says: "America's answer is awaited with calmness, as Germany cannot make greater concessions than she has already made."

TROUBLE FEARED IN PARIS.

The Troops Confined to Their Barracks by a Boulanger Disturbance.

THE DONAHUE ESTATE.

The Great Task of Its Partition About Completed.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—The heirs interested in the estate of the late Peter Donahue have for a year past been working to divide their joint property. Business considerations have prompted this desire, no family quarrels having entered into the matter. They have had to divide among themselves some $4,000,000 of railroad property and about $3,000,000 of real estate in this city. Mrs. Peter Donahue, Baroness von Schroeder and Colonel J. Mervyn Donahue are the three heirs. The latter was mainly instrumental in getting their railroad interests separated. He did it by buying out his brother and sister. He has given to Mrs. Peter Donahue $1,200,000 in cash for her interest in the San Francisco & North Pacific road and its branch lines. To the Baroness von Schroeder he gave $1,100,000 in bonds, secured by mortgage on the road. He accordingly has exclusive charge of the railroad now.

Concerning the property of the estate in this city, all of it is to be sold at public auction June 25, except a large brick business block facing on Mission, Tremont and First streets. Of the property to be sold the heirs will take an equal share of the proceeds.

FOULLY MURDERED.

The Body of a Man Found Near the Railroad Track in the Vicinity of Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, June 9.—This afternoon the body of a man was found near the railroad track, between this city and Davisville.

An investigation showed that the man had been foully murdered. His skull had been crushed in several places with some blunt instrument. Lying near the body was a boulder covered with blood, and it is presumed that this was the murderer's weapon. The body had been dragged about twenty feet and thrown face downward, and an old barley sack thrown over the head. There were evidences of a terrible struggle. The object was evidently robbery, as the victim's pockets were all turned inside out.

Letters found in the pockets of the murdered man indicated that his name was Milo Hawes and it is thought that he has a brother living in Los Angeles, evidently a farm laborer.

Constable Todhunter arrested two men on suspicion and lodged them in jail.

Campbell was on horseback, and claims that the shooting was in self-defense. The principals were the only eye-witnesses. A grudge is said to have been in part the cause of the shooting. Boyd bore a hard name. Campbell had just come in from a week's trip in the mountains, and is considered a quiet man under ordinary conditions. Boyd was shot in nine places.

THE FERRY SCANDAL.

More About the Wife's Suit for Divorce.

HER STORY OF THE PARIS ROW.

If It Be True, Ferry Was Jealous Without Cause and Guilty of Infidelity and Brutal Treatment.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—In the divorce suit which was begun here yesterday by Mrs. Evelyn P. Ferry against her husband, Clinton P. Ferry, of Tacoma, Mrs. Ferry says in her complaint that they always maintained their residence in San Francisco. About a year ago Ferry, having been very successful in speculation, made up his mind to travel, and so informed his wife and daughter. They started, and after a three months' tour in the United States, left New York last September for Paris. There they lived quietly, enjoying the sights of the great capital until the morning of April 15, when the American colony in Paris was surprised by the announcement that Clinton P. Ferry had accused his wife of infidelity, and was trying to have her confined in the St. Lazare prison, a place set aside for the punishment of common women. This indignity was spared Mrs. Ferry, so she declares, by the interference of friends and the kindness of a French magistrate, who refused to make an order committing her.

Mrs. Ferry, in her complaint, declares that she has made up her mind to throw off the mask she has been wearing, and to show that instead of her being the party who had sinned, it was her husband who was culpable, and who should suffer from the stigma he was trying to cast on her. She says from the time of leaving New York, her husband, who always has been of a jealous disposition, grew more and more suspicious of her actions, and used to reproach her daily, even for engaging in the most trivial conversation with outsiders. After their arrival in Paris he renewed his vigilance, and never let her go out of his sight.

The first open rupture took place on the 12th of November, in their Paris apartments, when he addressed her in language too foul to publish, and in the presence of witnesses attempted to strike her.

After the first outbreak these scenes were of frequent occurrence.

During his trips about Paris, Mrs. Ferry says, her husband became acquainted with a Frenchman named DuClerq, and whom he invited to his house and introduced to his wife and daughters. DuClerq could speak English fluently, and Mr. Ferry invited him to make one of his party. The Frenchman was agreeable, and for some time they all traveled about. Their guide was a brilliant conversationalist and was thoroughly familiar with the history of his city, and so he was the center of attraction on all their journeys. This caused Ferry to again become jealous.

On their return from one of their excursions, Ferry, after bidding their French friend good-bye and urging him to again visit them soon, turned on his wife and accused her of trying to win the affections of DuClerq. In spite of her protestations of innocence, he insisted that he had seen her press DuClerq's hand and make eyes at him continuously, and, further, that he had seen her slip a note to their guide. He then instructed his wife not to again receive DuClerq or even to recognize him on the street.

After that time Du Clerq did not again call at the house, but on April 13 sent a note stating that he was very ill at his rooms. On the 14th Mrs. Ferry went to visit DuClerq, and before she had been five minutes seated at his bedside, her husband rushed in and declared that she was guilty of infidelity. He ordered the police officer who accompanied him to take his wife to the St. Lazare, and she would have been confined there, but that friends went before the magistrate in her behalf and had her released.

That night Mrs. Ferry was compelled to spend in a small room in a third-class hotel, as the proprietors of first-class establishments would not receive her.

Next day, Mrs. Ferry says, her husband's attorney called at her hotel and requested her to sign a paper admitting that she had been unfaithful to her marriage vows, and that when her signature was appended thereto he would pay her $10,000, and $50 a month for the support of the child. He threatened that unless she consented to sign he would have her arrested on a criminal charge. Mrs. Ferry ordered the attorney to leave her room, and when he did so she went to her residence to get her clothing and her child. She found the entrance guarded by a police officer, who refused to allow her to go in.

She then commenced suit against her husband for the recovery of her child and wearing apparel, and while this suit was pending she met her husband at the entrance to the American consulate. He at once became furious and threatened to annihilate her, and, to carry his threat into execution, grabbed an umbrella from the hand of a bystander, and tried to break it over her head. When restrained by bystanders, he addressed the vilest epithets to his wife, and compared her to the lowest women in Paris.

Mrs. Ferry says that the conduct of her husband has been that of a crazy man since they left America, and she would have returned home long ago, but that her father wrote her to brave it out and try to prevent a scandal.

For the sake of her family, she alleges that she put up with a great deal of abuse, which, under ordinary circumstances, she would not have endured. She declares that she has never been guilty of the crime charged.

Ferry is supposed to be worth $2,000,000, and Mrs. Ferry asks the court to set apart a certain portion of it for her, and also to award her the custody of the child. She also asks for $500 a month alimony and costs for the purpose of prosecuting this action.

Late advices received by Attorney Booth from Paris, show that there is pending a criminal charge against Mrs. Ferry, and also a suit for divorce. While disputing the authority of the French court to act in the matter, Mrs. Ferry's French attorney declares that they have enough testimony to prevent Ferry from obtaining his decree, and obtaining one for Mrs. Ferry instead.

The suit which Mrs. Ferry brought for the recovery of her clothing and her child was decided in her favor.

BLANKETS FOR SEATTLE.

Two Hundred and Fifty Pair To Be Sent—The Canvass To Be Resumed This Morning.

Mayor DeLashmutt received the following dispatch yesterday, which explains itself:

VANCOUVER BARRACKS, W. T., June 9.

To the Mayor, Portland, Or.: Mayor of Seattle wants 250 blankets. Can you send them from Portland?

JOHN GIBBON,
Brigadier General.

The following was immediately sent to Mayor Moran, of Seattle:

We send you by first train 250 pair of blankets. Portland is ready in every way to assist you. How can we do so most effectually?

CHARLES H. DODD,
Chairman Relief Committee.

General Gibbon was also telegraphed as follows:

We will send the blankets to Seattle.

CHARLES H. DODD,
Chairman Relief Committee.

Mr. Dodd was asked by a reporter whether he intended to do any more soliciting for funds for the relief of the sufferers by the fire or not.

"Yes," he replied, "the committee will start out again this morning canvassing for both Seattle and Johnstown. I think our help will be needed by the former, and whatever they are in want of they shall have, if it is in our power to grant it. We will send the 250 pair of blankets by the first train, and more, too, if they need them."

HANLAN, THE OARSMAN.

He Is a Great Admirer of Searle, the Young Australian.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—Ned Hanlan, ex-champion oarsman of the world, who arrived from Australia last evening, is full of admiration of Searle, the young Australian sculler, who is to row O'Connor for the championship of the world in England this fall.

"Searle is one of the most wonderful athletes Australia has produced, and that is saying a good deal," remarked Hanlan to-day. "He far outclasses such men as Beach and Kemp, and no one will deny that both are great oarsmen. Searle has the advantage of a most powerful constitution, and is a phenomenal stayer. He is also a spurter of the most extraordinary kind. He starts away on a race at forty-five strokes a minute, and will keep it up a couple of minutes, and then slow down to thirty-six, and still keep flying. After a while he runs up the stroke again to forty-five, and keeps alternating that way right through the race. The man that beats him is certainly entitled to the championship of the world. I know of no one who can beat him except it is O'Connor. O'Connor has speed enough to keep even with Searle for a mile. I am certain of that, but it remains to be seen whether he can go the distance."

MR. VILLARD'S MOVEMENTS.

The Party Will Not Come to Portland Until Wednesday.

TACOMA, June 9.—Henry Villard and the two New York attorneys, Beaman and Solomon, were driven around the city this morning by Isaac W. Anderson, manager of the Tacoma Land Company. The whole party, together with Land Agent Paul Schulze, went to Seattle this afternoon, where they will remain and await the arrival of President T. F. Oakes on Tuesday, and go to Portland on the following day.

Mr. Villard refuses to be interviewed relative to railroad matters. He expresses astonishment at the wonderful development of the Sound cities, and says that he had no conception of their growth from the reports he had received from time to time.

Among other points visited here this morning were the places at the head of the bay at which the terminal works are in course of construction. Mr. Villard was highly pleased with the admirable location of the new freight warehouses, depots, machine shops, etc.

Mr. Villard is much reduced in flesh since his visit to the Sound country some years ago. When he arrived yesterday and was greeted by Land Agent Schulze, both gentlemen had a cheerful conversation in the language of the Fatherland.

A Miner's Perilous Adventure.

BUTTE, June 9.—This morning, Charles Cheesman, a miner at the Mono mine, met with one of the most novel accidents known to the lot of the hazardous miner, and miraculously escaped with only serious bruises about his body. He had ascended a 200-foot incline shaft and got off the cage at the station, near the mouth of the shaft, when his candle went out, and before he could relight it he was struck by a descending cage, which threw him into the shaft and started him down the incline. Down this dark descent he slid and rolled 130 feet, when, by dint of strength and presence of mind, he managed to stop and hold himself until his partner, who had missed him from the station, came to his assistance and rescued him from his perilous position.

A Posse in Pursuit of Thieves.

HELENA, Mont., June 9.—A posse of determined ranchmen is in hot pursuit of a band of thieves in Northern Montana, that has been committing numerous depredations in the Missouri river valley, in the vicinity of Craig. It is supposed the robbers have a boat in which they travel at night, and secrete it in the brush during the day. It will have to be abandoned at Great Falls, if they hope to escape capture, as notice has been given to the officials, but it is hardly probable that the robbers will reach that place, as the posse, numbering at least a dozen men, are on their trail, and will probably catch up with them long before they reach it. As the robbers are armed, a fight will probably ensue before they can be captured.

A NAUGHTY MINISTER.

He Deserts a Wife and Family in the East, and Is Arrested at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—About two months ago, a young man giving the name of Charles Johnson, arrived here and secured employment as reporter on a local paper. He is well educated, and always appeared to good advantage, being a smooth talker. A telegram was received here a day or two since asking the authorities to arrest C. H. Smith, who was wanted in Boston for deserting his wife and children. The description sent to the officers here tallied with that of Johnson, and the police were on the lookout to-day, when a distant relative of Johnson pointed him out as C. H. Smith, of Boston. He was immediately taken into custody.

It was later learned he had been a minister in Massachusetts for seven years. A short time before his disappearance he was elected pastor of a suburban church in Boston.

CINCINNATI SUNDAY LAW.

A Large Number of Arrests of Saloonkeepers and Others—Ball Games Stopped.

CINCINNATI, June 9.—The baseball games by amateur clubs were stopped by the police to-day.

Two theatrical managers were arrested for giving performances, but the performances were not stopped. Two concert saloons attempted to go on in full blast, but they were shut up by repeated arrests.

There were nearly 100 arrests of saloonkeepers. Several of these were repeated arrests on the same men.

A crowd of men set upon an informer on upper Vine street, and beat him badly during the afternoon.

THE SIOUX COMMISSION.

Hollowhorn Bear Withdraws From the Opposition and Signs the Agreement.

ROSEBUD, D. T., June 9.—At the council last night, Hollowhorn Bear withdrew from the opposition. This morning High Hawk signified his agreement, and both will sign. This breaks up the unfriendly element, and insures the acceptance of the terms offered by the government, so far as this agency is concerned.

The commissioners will remain a few days longer in order to obtain the signatures of Indians living at distant points, and will then go to the Pine Ridge agency.

CYCLONE IN ARKANSAS.

Lives Lost and Churches, Stores and Residences Destroyed.

ARKANSAS CITY, Ark., June 9.—A cyclone swept through this city last night. Two churches and ten stores and residences were wrecked, and considerable other damage done. The only lives lost were those of Kate Walton, aged 15 Tudy Walton, aged 9. Mrs. Walton and a daughter were badly injured.

A Fine Place for Blaine's Brother.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—A local paper says: It has been settled that Register of Wills Clagett will be succeeded on the 1st of July by Robert Blaine, brother of the secretary of state. At present Blaine is employed in the agricultural department of the museum annex, at $1200 salary per annum. For some time it has been understood that he was an applicant for a district office, but it is not known definitely which of the many places he preferred. The position of register is worth about $7000 per annum.

Death of an Artist and Author.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—News of the death of Jules Tavernier, artist and author, was brought up from Honolulu by the steamer Zealandia. Tavernier, who was well known in this city, died suddenly on the morning of the 18th ult., from the effects of the excessive use of alcoholic stimulants. As this fact was certified to by two physicians, no inquest was held on the remains. Tavernier's funeral was held the afternoon of his death. In 1872 Tavernier landed in New York, where he contributed to the earliest numbers of the New York Graphic to "Harper's Weekly, Bazaar and Monthly." He came to this city soon after. He was one of the founders of the Palette club, this city, and at one time was first vice president of the Art Association. In assisting young artists along the road to fame he probably did as much as any man in California.

Secretary Noble has decided that the excess of $1.25 per acre for land in section 22, township 1 south, range 14 east, in The Dalles, Or., land district, was erroneously charged, the case being that of the United States vs. Jacob A. Gilford.

Not Dr. Cronin's Clothes.

CHICAGO, June 9.—A bad mistake seems to have been made by the police and other interested persons regarding the bloody clothes reported last night as those worn by Dr. Cronin when he last left his office. The fact is now proved that the slashed and gory garments were not Cronin's at all, but belong to Albert Herzog, a barber, who committed suicide about five weeks ago. After the undertaker cut the clothes off the corpse, he threw them into an ash barrel, where they were found by a scavenger.

A Pentecost Band Driven Out.

TUSCOLA, Ill., June 9.—The people of Hindsboro gathered together last night and drove the Pentecost band, which has been holding meetings there, out of town, and demolished their large canvas tabernacle. The band is supposed to be making converts to Mormonism, and the people were determined to rid themselves of the traveling proselyters.

The Shah in Berlin.

BERLIN, June 9.—The shah of Persia arrived here to-day, and was welcomed with much ceremony by the emperor, a number of princes, Herbert Bismarck and a crowd of officials. Royal salutes were fired, and the shah received an ovation en route to Bellevue palace, and a grand banquet was given the evening in his honor.

Two Men Drowned at the Niagara.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., June 9.—At Niagara Falls this afternoon "Jacko" Walker, a boatman, and Frank Davy were drowned. They started in a boat from the shore above the inlet of the Hydraulic canal, for the head of Goat Island, but lost control of the boat, which was drawn into the current and carried over Horseshoe falls.

Three Women Drowned.

PITTSBURG, June 9.—By the upsetting of a skiff on the river this evening, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Carroll and daughter were drowned. Mr. Thomas and Mr. Carroll were placed under arrest, to await investigation by the coroner. It is said the men were intoxicated, and were unable to manage the boat properly.

In closing the public schools of our city it is with no little pride that we speak of the result of our efforts as shown in the final examination, notwithstanding the numerous changes that have occurred within the year. Whatever has been done, has been done to promote the best interests of all concerned. How well we have succeeded is for you, dear reader, to decide.

Corporal punishment has been almost unknown; pupils have become kind and obedient, not only to their teachers, but in a great measure to each other.

Parents have co-operated, friends have given encouragement, teachers have worked patiently and faithfully together. The school board have aided in every possible manner, and the greatest harmony has permeated every avenue of school discipline.

Rome, however was not built in a day. In order that good schools may be had, a foundation must be laid embodying a system which, if carried on, will move toward perfection.

Perfection is never reached, however, and the addled brain who thinks he has reached it, had better "shuffle off." But we should drive at and keep trying to perfect a system that promises a success, since it is by system only that the greatest good may be accomplished. School teaching is certainly one of the highest professions, since its work is to educate human souls to future usefulness. The child must have the proper physical, moral and mental trainings.

Teachers are needed who are unquestionably qualified to direct, entertain and instruct those placed in their care. How essential it is then that they should realize and appreciate fully the responsibility of dealing with these, the most important of all.

School teaching, too, is a matter of business. A straightforward and upright course should be pursued and a policy adopted that is at once practical and systematical. This system should be carried out by a corps of devoted teachers and the results are obvious.

In conclusion, we have done our best, and sincerely hope that our efforts will meet the approval of all. Any changes that may be made for the coming year will be made in the interest of the schools. Should we go away we shall take with us many pleasant memories. Let the changes be as they may, I am certain your present corps of teachers would join me in wishing that your schools may prosper, and in the not far distant future stand pre-eminently among not only the first public schools of this great Northwest, but of this great nation. Respectfully,

CARL W. YOUNG, Supt.

YOUNG FOLKS' SOCIAL.

The young people of the Presbyterian church held their dime social and entertainment at Union hall last Saturday evening.

The programme, which consisted of songs and recitations, was quite interesting.

Miss Agnes Arnberg and Miss Katie Barnes rendered their recitations well.

The singing by Mrs. Menefee, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Loomis and Mr. Thompson, was highly appreciated.

The dialogue, "Aunt Betsy's Beaux," was very amusing, and Miss L. A. Wilson kept the audience in good humor by her admirably performed part.

The attendance was quite large, and all seemed to have a good social time. The proceeds are to be used for the edification of the Young People's Society. The receipts were $27 35.

POLITICAL MEETING.

Pursuant to a call, the people's party met Saturday evening at the Albina school house, and by a unanimous vote J. H. Steffens was placed on the ticket as candidate for mayor, instead of C. H. Hill, resigned. The people's ticket now stands: Mayor, J. H. Steffen; treasurer, M. E. Thompson. Councilmen—First ward, A. Fink and William Dice; Second ward, G. W. Heath and D. H. Harnett; Third ward, C. M. Rieman and S. C. Ross.

NEW ENTERPRISE.

Mr. A. Bowen and J. N. Leach have taken a five years' lease of the Merchants' mill in Portland and will put on a force of carpenters and machinists to remodel and repair the mill. They will also put in new and improved machinery so as to do a first-class and jobbing business. The above named gentlemen are men of means and practical experience. Mr. Bowen has had full charge of the Albina Flouring Mill for several years.

FUNERAL SERVICE.

The funeral services of Gertrude, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Bleick, took place from the residence yesterday afternoon, Rev. G. W. Theiss officiating. The funeral was largely attended, and the floral tributes profuse and beautiful. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of their numerous friends in their sad affliction.

CHEERFUL GIVERS.

Albina was among the first to contribute to the Seattle sufferers. In a very few hours $130 was raised among the citizens. The N. P. T. baseball club played a game with the Standards, of Portland, at McCoy's grounds yesterday. The gate receipts will be contributed to the Seattle sufferers.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL NOTES.

Mrs. M. E. Thompson has returned from a visit to Santa Rosa.

Mrs. James Nichols, from The Dalles, is visiting relatives and friends in Albina.

The Albina Flouring Mills have closed down for general repairs, and it is not known for how long.

The social given Friday evening by the Baptist mission was quite well attended. The programme was short and sweet, while the ice cream and strawberries appealed to the sympathy of all present. The receipts were about $12.

Miss Maud Kelley, a teacher in the Albina school, has gone to Seattle to spend her vacation at home.

Captain Isiah Smith, an old pioneer of Albina, has returned with his family to Aberdeen, W. T. He is now captain of the steamer Aberdeen, at Gray's harbor.

Mrs. J. P. Randall has returned from an extended visit to Southern California. Miss Allie Goddard, who accompanied her, will remain in Los Angeles for some time.

A great many of our citizens have gone to the Nehalem valley to take up timber claims, among whom are Professor C. W. Young, Dr. Wise, Joseph and Robert Menefee.

Mr. George Hughes, of Albany, has been here for several days visiting with his son, Mr. John T. Hughes, police judge. He expressed himself very much disappointed in the growth of Albina, but agreeably so, as he expected to find a rural backwoods village instead of a flourishing city.

THE MARCH OF IMPROVEMENT.

Great Changes Being Wrought in the Country Beyond the East Side Suburbs.

The increase in value of property about Mount Tabor has had the effect of making people who own property east of that place realize that it soon will be much more valuable than at present.

The section line and Powell's valley roads are being improved in a systematic manner, and in a style which will soon result in their being made as good roads as can be found anywhere. Heretofore some dirt has been thrown into the ruts in the roads, which made dust in summer and fathomless mud in winter; but now the roads are straightened, cleared to their full width, and a fine roadbed of gravel laid along the center for miles. Mr. Peterson, of Mount Tabor, is supervisor of both the section line and Powell's valley roads at this end, and Mr. Shattuck, further out, is pursuing the same course, getting good gravel from pits and putting on plenty of it.

The country south of Mount Tabor has been cleared off and improved wonderfully within the past few years, and fine fields of clover and grain, thrifty orchards and splendid berry gardens are seen on every side, clear to the summit of Kelly's butte. A little distance beyond this butte the country slopes gently to the east, and widens out into a broad tract of level land, which is rapidly being improved, and where there are already some of the finest farms in the county.

Fine crops of clover, potatoes and grain are raised in that section, and a number of farmers there have made fortunes in raising these articles. Mr. Knonberg has a magnificent, large farm on the slope of a butte, and near by Mr. Lynch and Mr. Graham have fine farms. Haymaking is already going on out in that section, and such crops of clover as are being cut along the roads out there can hardly be found out of Oregon.

Schoolhouses and churches are found every two or three miles, and everybody seems prosperous and happy, and all are looking forward to having a railroad out through that section before long.

RAISING MONGOLIAN PHEASANTS.

No Trouble About Raising Them in Captivity if They Are Fed Properly.

Several persons, among them a professional breeder of fancy fowls, have writen to THE OREGONIAN to state that it is impossible to raise Mongolian pheasants in confinement.

This theory, however, is proved to be false by Mr. Ferry Henshaw, of this city, who has raised two broods in a back yard right in town. At least, he has raised them so far that there is no doubt of his making a success of it. One brood is a month old, and the little fellows are so completely feathered out that their wings have been clipped. The other brood are a week younger, and can run and fly like anything. Out of forty-one eggs, placed under two hens, thirty-six chicks hatched out.

Mr. Henshaw has twenty-one of these alive and says that not one of the others died from natural causes. The old hens who claim the broods are kept in large boxes with wire netting in front, through which holes are made to let the little pheasants run out. These boxes are in a coop about 8x16 feet, made of lathes placed close together to keep the little fellows from flying away. The three-weeks' old birds fly around like sparrows, and when a worm is thrown to them will snatch it from one another and run and race like young turkeys. The month old ones fight like game chickens, and all of them are so tame they will take their food from a person's hand and allow themselves to be picked up and handled.

No extra precautions have been taken in rearing these birds, and the circumstances and surroundings are certainly not so favorable as they are in the country. Mr. Henshaw thinks that his success arises altogether from feeding, and he uses some kind of a mixture which they eat heartily and thrive on. So it will be seen that the Mongolian pheasant can be raised in confinement if one only knows how to feed them.

LOUD SCREAMS ATTRACTED THEM.

Frank Highfield Arrested on a Charge of Beating Mrs. Leslie.

About 11 o'clock last night as Bert Towne and M. G. Butterfield were walking along Fifth street, they were attracted by loud cries coming from the house on the northeast corner of Fifth and Clay streets. Before they reached the corner they met a large, heavy set man, whose appearance and gait indicated that he was trying to get away. As they got still nearer the corner, they were accosted by a small boy carrying a large club, who pointed toward the heavy-set man saying, "That is the man, who has been trying to kill my mother."

Mr. Butterfield and Towne accordingly followed the big man, who began to zigzag about the streets in his haste to get away. They kept following him for some time, and when they got an opportunity they telephoned for a police officer. Two officers arrived soon after and found the man crouching behind a fence in some bushes, at the foot of East Park street.

They took him to the police station, where he gave his name as Frank Highfield. He refused to talk of the affair, and claimed that he had merely pushed the woman, Mrs. Leslie, who is his half sister by marriage, and if she is hurt she got hurt by falling against a wood pile. Further than that he had nothing to say.

It is claimed by others, who witnessed the affair, that Highfield struck the woman, Mrs. Leslie, several blows in the face, because she had been out walking with another gentleman.

AID FOR SEATTLE ODD FELLOWS.

Their Present Wants Are Supplied, but Danger of Distress in a Few Days.

A general meeting of the Odd Fellows of Portland was held yesterday at the Odd Fellows' temple, to take into consideration the matter of aid for their brethren in Seattle. It was the unanimous expression that a fund should be raised and forwarded, and a generous sum was at once pledged.

A committee, consisting of A. N. Gambell, H. C. Allen and J. T. Stewart, was appointed, with full power to act in the premises.

The following telegram was sent:

To H. G. Struve, P. G. M., Seattle: The Odd Fellows of this city are raising funds for the relief of our Seattle brethren. Telegraph us the situation and to whom we may remit the money.

A. N. GAMBELL, Grand Secretary.

The following reply was received:

SEATTLE, June 9.

A. N. Gambell, Grand Secretary I. O. O. F.: All immediate and urgent wants supplied, but danger of distress in a few days. Money aid probably most available. Send to G. W. Hale, grand treasurer.

Odd Fellows express deepest thanks for your generous offer.

H. G. STRUVE.

Sub-committees will be at once appointed to call upon the Odd Fellows of Portland and East Portland for their contributions, and they will doubtless meet with a generous response.

Clearing House Returns.

BOSTON, June 9.—A table compiled from dispatches to the Post from the managers of the leading clearing houses of the United States shows that total gross exchanges for the week ended June 8 were $1,118,648,644, an increase of 28.1 per cent., compared with the corresponding week last year.

STINGETH LIKE AN ADDER.

This Was the Text of Rev. Dr. C. E. Cline's Sermon Last Evening.

He Handles the Drunkard and His Haunts Without Gloves—The Rumseller and His Victim—The Sot's Poor Wife and Children.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Cline, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, delivered a very stirring sermon last evening, taking as his text, "It Stingeth Like an Adder." The following is the full text of his sermon:

I want to introduce you to a family of a man and wife and seven children. The husband and father is known as a sot, for he drinks habitually and to excess. He comes home, sometimes every evening for a week or ten days at a time, just able to get home. He is then cross, abusive and brutal. He rarely brings anything into the house to eat or wear.

They move every little while, because the poor woman is unable to keep the rent paid.

The woman conceals, as best she can, her husband's habits and their condition. She does this for the sake of their children.

BUT THE TRUTH IS, SHE IS HEARTBROKEN,

Utterly broken in spirit and hope. Joy, she she has none. But for her children, the grave would be sweet.

Let us look at this case. This woman came to this man who is her husband, an innocent girl; full of hope, full of anticipation, full of love; dreading nothing, trusting everything. He was to stand between her and the cold world. She was to do a woman's share, and he was to do a man's share; and thus they were to go down the valley together hand in hand, each a help to the other.

When they stood before the minister she had visions of a cozy little home he was to furnish her, and of children that were to be born to them; and of the labor that was to be made a pleasure to her in caring for him and them. O, that was an hour of brightness and joy to her, for all these things were in that girl's heart when she stood up in the parlor of her father's home, and resigned her life to the keeping of the man who had wooed and won her.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

What is the matter with that wizen-faced, dejected, discouraged, hollow-eyed woman? What makes those poor children look like they do? Well, it is the same old story. Their father got into the habit of attending the saloon, that gilded place established in an important corner near him. He commenced in a light way, only taking a drink or two each day, progressing however till he drank more regularly. By and by the appetite was fixed, and then he came home quite often drunk. One night he cruelly beat the patient woman, but oftener he came home so stupid and drunk that he rolled into the bed like a brute, and slept the sleep of a drunken beast.

O, how the sensitive nature of that delicate woman shrank from lying in the same bed with that heavy slumbering drunken brute; and what pierced her heart, was the fact that he was the father of her children, and the same man who had once courted her, and whom she so passionately loved.

Can you appreciate her feelings?

Well, he slumbered on till morning, when he arose with bloodshot eyes and went back to the saloon, where he stayed all day.

As a matter of fact, no work was done by him. All that was done, was done by the woman, and how could she do much outside and care for all these seven children in the home? Once he took by force from her the earnings of a day's washing; a washing she had done while the children cried and fought and scrambled all day at home while their mother was away. Look into this home with me, and I am not overdrawing the facts. Food is scant; rags, yes, rags. Rags on the children, rags for beds, and rags stuffed in the windows where the glass has been broken out. Cold! Yes, cold, for it was not a mild winter like the last in Oregon; and hunger, too.

Why, the truth is, that poor mother hasn't had a sufficient meal for weeks—not since she got dinner where she washed. The children are not well enough clad to go to church or Sunday school, and they are ashamed to go to the day school, because everybody understands they are the children of a drunkard. What is to be the outcome of these children? The mother loves them—of course she does. Is it any wonder she is heart-broken? She gets up in the morning as tired as she went to bed. She goes to bed to sleep, but she does not sleep.

Do you ask why? Well, the condition of her children troubles her; what they are to do for breakfast, and the unknown events of the next day, and then, the drunken brute beside her—how can she sleep? Why, at 2 o'clock her pillow is wet with tears; she has in mind her children ill-fed, ill-clad, growing up in such a condition of ignorance and vice.

Only last night two of the little girls came home crying because a rude boy had twitted them for being the children of a drunkard, and had laughed at their toes sticking out of their shoes. Is it any wonder she can't sleep? Is it any wonder she lies awake and cries? Is it any wonder she rises in the morning more tired and more dragged out than when she went to bed? What is there in life for her? Nothing, absolutely nothing but anguish of heart. Poor woman, it were better, but for her children, if she could die and be laid away in the grave where the saloonkeeper and brewer could no longer be her tormentors. She sometimes has hope that somehow, or something will save her husband. Her troubles are greater than she can bear.

WHAT IS THERE FOR HER?

Rags, hunger, desolation, despair, death. Nothing for her, and worse than nothing for her children, when she dies and leaves them. Clothes? Why, that woman has literally had none for ten years. Food and comfort? She has neither. There is no carpet on the floor. No curtains on the windows—only a newspaper fastened up with pins on two of them, and an old apron on another. She and her children do not live, they simply exist. There are good things, but not for her. There are pleasant surroundings, but not for her and hers. The children only last night, two of them, came home and told how they saw the butcher, with his great white apron on, cutting steaks and roasts for the people, and how their mouths watered for some, but the brewer and the pimpled-faced saloonkeeper had all their father's money, and they could have no steak or roast—not even a soup-bone. Their houses (the brewers' and the saloonkeepers') are well furnished. They have curtains of lace, and dishes of china, and a cook in the kitchen who is an expert at rare dishes, and a second-girl to do the work of the house. And why should they not have, for they have all the earnings of hundreds of men, who take almost nothing home, but contribute it all to them.

This poor mother conceals her trouble from her children as well as she can, for if she should give up what would become of them? The sodden, blear-eyed father now cares but little for her. He has forgotten what he promised the minister the day of their marriage. He is beyond that. Nor does he care for the helpless children he brought into the world for he is completely chained to this awful vice which makes him worse than nothing to them. She often tries to keep them out of his sight, and where they can't hear his senseless drunken oaths, and she is glad when he leaves the wretched home and sorry when he returns again. What is there in life for her? A dreary journey day by day, each day a little worse than the others, foot sore, over sharp rocks with the certainty that ere long she shall fall and perish, leaving those behind her, like a part of the late crew of the Alaskan—helpless and hopeless.

And all this time the distiller keeps up his fires, the brewer brews and the saloonkeeper sells, and the press declares that for a moneyed license they ought to be permitted so to do. What do these distillers and brewers, and their lackeys, the saloonkeepers, and the license editors, care for the poor wretch who pays down upon the bar the bread taken out of the mouths of that poor woman and her children and the clothes that ought to cover their backs? What difference does it make to them that this infernal business is dragging down a father to death and hell? What difference does it make to them if it is killing that mother? What difference does it make if it is making thieves out of four boys and prostitutes out of three girls? It pays them a handsome living and a round sum into the city treasury. What difference does it make to them that the community must soon bury both the father and mother and put in jail the seven children, and have a long bill of expense for their crimes.

Not a whit; these $2 for the distiller, $5 for the saloonkeeper and $500 license for the state. Who cares for the piteous moans of that mother and the oaths and cursings of those children, when there is so much money in the business for the men engaged in it? Will the time come when the public conscience will be aroused to the enormity of this crime?

Will the time come when editors and legislators and grand juries will say to the rum traffic, "You shalt not kill this woman and destroy body and soul of these children?" I believe the time is coming when these men will say this, and say it in a way that will not temporize or compromize with the power of rum. Nor are these sorrows confined to hovels of the poor; the hideous claws of this beast reaches into many a home of the rich, and blights and blasts all happiness there.

The horrors of Johnstown and Seattle are fearful indeed; but not to be compared to those of this business of the saloon, which is far more greedy than the waters of the Conemaugh.

THE POLICE COURTS SHOW that there are mothers in Portland, some of them in velvet and satin, that moan piteously because of this traffic, and yet the press says "another $100 license," and the distiller stirs his fires and the brewer brews and the saloonkeeper sells; and they will continue to do this till decent people rise and say it shall cease.

Bark Lizzie Williams was wrecked on Tugidak island on April 22. Total loss.

Bark Emerald was burned at Port Gamble, May 26. Is probably a total loss.

German ship Henrietta put into Pauillac prior to May 29, leaking badly, having been damaged in a collision with the steamer Dupuy de Lome.

British bark Eugenie, from Tacoma, has arrived at Sydney, with rudder post started and with loss of part of deck load. She will probably discharge.

THE OREGONIAN RAILWAY.

What the Liquidator Is Doing Towards Liquidating—He Is Allowed an Assistant.

The following from the Dundee (Scotland) Courier and Argus, of May 25, may be of interest to persons having claims against the Oregonian Railway Company:

Mr. David Myles, accountant, Dundee, liquidator of the above company, presented a note to Lord Wellwood yesterday in which he asked authority to make calls and settle the list of contributories, etc. He explains that the assets of the company consist of the railways in Oregon, real estate in the city of Portland, valued at about £12,000, and uncalled capital of the company amounting to £68,000. The liabilities of the company were £214,700 debenture bonds, and £49,000 due to the British Linen Company bank.

He was unable to present any state of the company's affairs, or even an approximate state, but had dispatched an attorney to Oregon to investigate the state of affairs there. At present, however, he understood that the railways in Oregon had been burdened under the authority of one of the Oregonian courts with liens having priority over the bondholders' mortgages to the extent of $428,137, and that they would under the most favorable circumstances be utterly inadequate to meet the amount due under the debenture bonds. It would therefore be necessary to make a call on the members of the remaining £2 2s 6d per share in respect of the 32,000 ordinary shares issued. He asked the court to authorize him to call up this payment, amounting to £67,951 10s, and authority to call for payment of £7622 14s 2d in respect of arrears of calls due by twenty-three contributories.

The list of contributories numbered 170. Mr. Galloway intimated that answers had been lodged for only one contributory, and in the case of the other two the induciæ had not yet expired. He asked his lordship, with the exception of these three, to grant the prayer of the petition. His lordship, after consultation with the judges of the First division, granted the authority asked, and directed that the calls shall be payable in two installments, the first on the 15th of June and the second on the 2d of August.

He also empowered the liquidator to appoint Mr. Thomas Thornton, solicitor, of Dundee, as solicitor and law agent to assist him in the performance of his duties, and fixed the 2d of August as the date on or before which the creditors of the company are to prove their debts or claims, or to be excluded from the benefit of any distribution made before such debts are proved.

THE O. R. & N. EXTENSION.

Preliminary Survey Made to the Mouth of the Wallowa River.

The O. R. & N. surveyors are still at work in the Grand Ronde canyon and have completed surveying a preliminary line to the mouth of the Wallowa river, says the La Grande Gazette. The party is now in charge of Engineer W. P. Watson. The running of the line to the Wallowa river has been the means of correcting wrong impressions that have heretofore existed in regard to distances. The distance from Elgin to the mouth of the Wallowa is about fourteen miles, and as the only measurement of the distance before the survey was that of observations made from the back of a cayuse while climbing over the hills, it has always been supposed that it was a good twenty miles to the stream which the redfish navigate. The declivity averages twenty-five feet to the mile, which in a railroad track is practically the same thing as being level. Engineer Watson recently made a trip into Wallowa and discovered that Joseph is 1700 feet higher than Elgin and 400 feet higher than Enterprise. The Wallowa hill is 1000 feet higher than the bridge. The distance from Looking Glass to the mouth of the Wallowa, which has generally been set down as six miles, is but two miles and a half by the railroad survey.

The above is important to Portland, owing to the fertile and productive country lying between La Grande and Joseph in Wallowa county. This branch will be the most profitable the O. R. & N. can ever have and it will checkmate the plans of Mr. Hunt and the Northern Pacific in seeking to take to Tacoma the produce belonging by natural laws to Portland. The engineering difficulties, so long contended, prove of no moment. The timber lands of Looking Glass, as well as other districts which this branch will open, are said to be among the finest in Oregon.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla requires smaller doses, and is more effective, than other blood medicines.

AN EXCELLENT EXHIBITION.

Splendid Riding and Daring Feats of Horsemanship by Miss Myrtle Peek at City View Park.

Nearly 1000 persons assembled at City View park yesterday afternoon to witness the daring equestrian feats of Miss Myrtle Peek, champion long distance and Roman standing lady rider of the world. Of her skill and dexterity as a rider there can be but one opinion, and that the most favorable.

The first event on the programme was a race between the riderless horse, Long View, and Athol, the lady riding the latter. The horses started well, but the former soon forged ahead about a length, which he kept until the last quarter, and, although Miss Peek was busy with the whip for the last 100 yards, she suffered defeat. Time, 1:55½. The event was very exciting, as it was seen that she was trying her best to pass the fleet riderless horse.

Then followed the Roman standing race, one mile dash, to beat two minutes. This was the daring event and excited great interest. Miss Peek rode Ghost and Eddie Smith, standing with one foot on each horse's back. As in the first race, she rode against Long View. At the first attempt the horses got off, the first half mile being very fast. Holding the reins in one hand she plied the whip vigorously with the other, and amid applause passed under the wire in the fast time of 1:50, according to the watches of several timekeepers, about a length behind Long View. After finishing both these races, the latter, which is a very intelligent horse, came back to the grand stand and stopping still, looked up to the judges and never budged until the latter announced their decision.

The next event was a very interesting one. Miss Peek drove the black stallion Fred Arnold, jr., on the track in front of the grand stand to a road cart without lines, bridle, hitching or tugs, just by the motion of the whip. She performed different and difficult feats that way driven.

The last race was running, one-half mile, to 68-pound skeleton wagons. Miss Peek drove Ghost and Eddie Smith, against Regal and Athol, driven by B. H. Demarest. The former won with ease, although Mr. Demarest did his best to pass her. Time, 59¼ seconds.

Miss Peek as a rider and driver would be very hard to beat. Her programme is the newest and most novel seen in Portland for many a day. In addition to the above, Miss Peek will ride a five-mile race at the City View park to-day to beat ten minutes. She will change horses each mile, without touching the ground, in front of the grand stand.

OPENING SERVICES.

The Second Evangelical church, located in Tibbetts addition to East Portland, was thrown open for services yesterday afternoon at 3 P. M. Rev. C. C. Poling, of Lafayette, Or., preached a masterly sermon on "The Head of the Church" to an intelligent and appreciative congregation, after which he gave a little history of the development of their denomination in Portland and vicinity, but spoke specifically of the rapid stride made on the East Side of the river in the five years of operation as a church.

The citizens of South East Portland and the Evangelical church have great cause for congratulation in securing such a fine house of worship in that beautiful and rapidly developing part of the city.

Rev. L. S. Fisher, of the First Evangelical church, will preach in this church every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Oregonian.

PORTLAND, MONDAY, JUNE 10.

WHY NOT SATISFACTORY.

It is announced that Mr. Henry Villard will be at Portland in a day or two, and recently it was said that on his arrival he intended to make "a statement." What Mr. Villard may say will receive attention; and yet our people have learned that "statements" do not solve problems or control affairs.

THE OREGONIAN will be entirely plain with Mr. Villard. It will confess that it does not look to him or to his policy for any advantages to Oregon. His course during the past two years does not justify any expectation that his power, whatever it might be, will be used to serve the interests of our state. The tendency and effect of his policy, if not its purpose, has been to assail and weaken the autonomy of one of the principal railway systems of Oregon, and to transfer its business to the Northern Pacific. While the Northern has been permitted to extend its lines into the territory of the O. R. & N. at every point, Mr. Villard has been resolute and extreme in his opposition to extension of O. R. & N. lines into the territory of the Northern. Whatever has been done towards extension of the lines and business of the O. R. & N. has been carried over his opposition. Let us make this statement somewhat plainer.

The Northern has built, or is building, through its agent, Hunt, competitive lines into every part of the O. R. & N. country. Mr. Villard either has consented to this or has been powerless to prevent it. Observe that we are not complaining of the construction of the Northern Pacific-Hunt lines, nor is the country through which he is building them. What is complained of is the strenuous opposition made by Mr. Villard, evidently in the interest of the Northern, to construction of competitive lines in the Northern Pacific territory, and his use of the Oregon & Transcontinental to that end. While the Northern has been permitted to enter O. R. & N. territory at all points, the most desperate efforts have been made to prevent the O. R. & N. from pushing lines into localities occupied or claimed by the Northern. In other words, the effort has been to keep the O. R. & N. out of the country north of Snake river, while the Northern has been permitted and encouraged to push lines in all directions into the country south of it; and it is believed, moreover, that the resources of the O. R. & N. have been sapped through the O. & T. to assist the Northern with funds for its various operations. The relations of the present management of the O. & T. to the Northern suggest the probability and support the belief that the Northern has been aided with large sums drawn from the earnings of the O. R. & N. through the O. & T. In the East this statement has been freely made, and there appears no reason to doubt it.

By every means in his power Mr. Villard has opposed the construction of the O. R. & N.'s extensions or connections in the Palouse country, to Spokane Falls and to the Coeur d'Alene mines, evidently desiring to retain all that country for the Northern—though the Northern, through Hunt, was entering into competition with the O. R. & N. and cutting its business at all points towards the south and east. Every feature of the situation during the last two years has indicated a policy designed to "milk" the Oregon for the benefit of the Northern. Hunt is an agent on one side, and the Oregon & Transcontinental is an agent on the other. These facts are so plain that every one see them. Attacked in this manner, wound up in these toils, the Oregon has been unable to pursue an independent or energetic policy. Its autonomy is virtually destroyed. It has not been able to extend its lines, to construct branches, to give adequate service, to reduce rates; it has not even had rolling stock enough. It has been forced to keep the cormorant corporation, the Oregon & Transcontinental, which has had nothing but what it could extort from the O. R. & N., whose surplus has gone unceasingly into cavernous depths that are continually calling for "more."

The policy of Mr. Villard, then, is to hold the O. R. & N. in check, while the Northern takes the business, and even to draw from the former, through the O. & T., its surplus to help the latter. There can be no mistake about this; it is seen plainly by every one who is not blind to the situation. If the Union can be held to payment of the 6 per per cent. rental on the O. R. & N., while the Northern takes the business, there need be no worry in New York as to the effect on Portland and Oregon.

The criticism at Portland of Mr. Villard has simply been a protest against his effort to hamper or strip the Oregon road for the benefit of the Northern road. This is a policy that would render the Oregon road powerless, would injure the business of Portland and of Oregon, would leave the great territory north of Snake river to the Northern without competition and cut Oregon's business men out of that country, and would tie our hands while others were building up at our expense. And here THE OREGONIAN repeats what it has said before, namely, that since the Oregon & Transcontinental, in the hands of Mr. Villard, is the instrument of this policy, it is the enemy of Oregon, and to a large degree of the Northwest; and, as it was created by authority of Oregon, by Oregon's authority it ought to be disincorporated and dissolved. Mr. Villard's opposition to extension of the O. R. & N. lines in Northern territory, while the Northern has been entering the O. R. & N. territory at all possible points, is regarded here as the touchstone of his policy, the revelation of his purpose; and it has not been nor can it be satisfactory here.

AN INAPPRECIABLE QUANTITY.

The Northwestern Railroader puts forth a novel theory to account for an alleged increase of storms and floods in these latter years. It says that there are over 30,000 locomotives in use in North America; and that the vapor from these sent out into the atmosphere each week will measure over 50,000,000,000 cubic yards, which must be returned as rain, or 7,000,000,000 cubic yards a day—quite enough to produce rainfall every twenty-four hours. Other non-condensing steam engines add eight times as much more; so that the total mass of vapor discharged into the atmosphere must be each week more than 470,000,000,000 cubic yards.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean takes up this statement and examines it. It is evident, as that paper says, that the locomotives and other steam engines in use cannot convert into vapor any more water than they use; in other words, evaporation and precipitation must be exactly equal. A single locomotive uses on an average 10,000 gallons of water a day. Multiplying by 30,000—the number of locomotives in the country—gives a total of 300,000,000 gallons consumed per day. If they all run 300 days per year the total yearly evaporation of water will be 90,000,000,000 gallons. Estimating the number of other non-condensing engines to be eight times as great in capacity, as the Railroader puts it, the grand aggregate of evaporation by all the steam engines of America amounts to 810,000,000,000 gallons. That appears to be an immense volume of water, but it only equals the annual precipitation of two good-sized counties in the regions blessed by abundant rainfall, as the figures will show. One inch of rain per square mile amounts to 14,500,000 gallons. Forty inches is a fair annual average of rainfall in well-watered regions; and this gives a total of 580,000,000 gallons per square mile. Dividing the total product of steam evaporation by this sum, the result shows that it would furnish irrigation for about 1396 square miles of land—a little over thirty-eight geographical townships.

These figures show that the total product of artificial evaporation, if spread out over the entire continent, would be exceedingly thin; and we conclude, with the Inter-Ocean, that we shall be obliged to depend upon solar energy to raise the vapors necessary for the ample irrigation of the soil.

THE SENTIMENT OF A PRACTICAL MIND.

Representative McKinley is one of the most severely practical minds in the country. He is not a demagogue, not a "whooper," not a "crank," not a sentimentalist. He was a gallant soldier of the Twenty-third Ohio, which he joined as a private at 17 in May, 1861. He served in a regiment of which Rosecrans was the first colonel, and of which ex-President Hayes and the late Judge Stanley Matthews of the United States supreme court, were field officers. He fought at Antietam under General Cox, at Winchester and Cedar Creek under Sheridan, came out of the war at 21 a major, and was elected to congress in 1874, when but 30 years of age. McKinley in congress has risen to the first rank by his mastery of the purely practical, economic questions of the tariff, revenue and finance, as separated from questions of pure sentiment, and it is therefore fair to assume that when he makes an utterance concerning the settlements of the war it is the voice of a sober, practical statesman, as distinguished from an incendiary demagogue. In his memorial speech in New York city, McKinley said of the settlements of the war:

> They must stand as the irreversible judgment of battle and the inflexible decree of a nation of freemen. They must not be misinterpreted, they must not be nullified, they must not be weakened or shorn of their force under any pretext whatever; but must be acquiesced in freely in every part of the republic, without reservation or voidance or evasion. It must not be equality and justice in the written law only. It must be equality and justice in the law's administration everywhere, and alike administered in every part of the republic to every citizen thereof. It must not be the more cold formality of constitutional enactment. It must be a living birthright, which the poorest and the humblest may enjoy, and which the richest and most powerful dare not deny. Our black allies must neither be deserted nor forsaken. And every right secured them by the constitution must be as surely given to them as though God had put upon their faces the color of the Anglo-Saxon race. They fought for the flag in the war, and that flag, with all it represents and stands for, must secure them every constitutional right in peace. "Right is might and truth is God," and we might just as well remember now that God puts no nation in supreme place that will not do supreme work, and God keeps no nation in supreme place which will not meet the supreme duty of the hour.

This utterance is worth all the gabble about "the blue and the gray" that has been emitted during the last ten years. The frightful civil war of 1861-65 was, as boys who play marbles say, "a war for 'keeps;'" it was not a picnic, not a holiday in any sense. The nation invested a vast amount of blood and treasure on the issue of the contest, and it is determined, soon or late, to secure a dividend. The unsettled question of the War of the Rebellion is not the right of secession, for the sword has solved that Gordian knot. The unsettled question rests on the fact that the dominant party at the South persists in nullifying the right of political opponents to exercise the political privileges that the constitution guarantees to all. The persistency of this determination to refuse political rights at the South is made evident by the assassination of General Clayton in Arkansas, by the Lafayette election in Louisiana, where the democratic bulldozers and ballot box despoilers surrounded the polls and declared that no colored man should be allowed to vote even for a white man. The Forest City, Ark., riots complete a powerful indictment of the methods by which the silly South secures its solidity. McKinley sees clearly that this Southern situation needs to be solved, and solved rightly; and until it is solved rightly, and the solidity of the South ceases to exist, there will be eternal political war between the sections, and there ought to be eternal war, because the triumph of the nation, after a bitter struggle, was too frightfully expensive to throw away the legitimate dividend on the tremendous investment of blood, tears and treasure. The country could not do otherwise than free the negro, and, having freed him, it could not do otherwise than endow him with the suffrage. As General Sherman has put it, "The black man who was fit to wear the United States uniform, fit to bear the Federal bayonets, cannot be fairly denied the suffrage, and the South will have to yield to the inevitable or sink with her ship of the 'Solid South,' scuttled by her own stupid, reckless hand."

The South is up to its ears in debt, since the thirteen Southern states, including Kentucky and Missouri, have funded debts aggregating $95,858,613 besides an unfunded debt, amounting to $20,000,000 more. In round figures, $110,000,000 represents the Southern aggregate, including the unfunded debt. The remaining twenty-five states owe less than $48,000,000. That is, the Southern states are carrying two-thirds of all the state debts of the Union, and yet they persist in a policy of exclusion, ostracism and general hostility to those who insist that the victorious results of the War of the Rebellion, in shape of Federal legislation, shall be respected and enforced.

Now, men like McKinley, see that this conflict concerning the results of the war must go on to a solution so complete that it will be settled for all time. The argument of McKinley is sound; it is that of public equity. The government must keep its word to the black freedman as religiously as to the white ex-Confederate; it must keep its word to the Union veteran and make him feel that there is no place, in this nation so remote from Washington that the Federal arm cannot reach forth for his protection or the punishment of his assassins. And until it is as safe for any man to vote, and cast his vote, and have it counted fairly, under the palmettoes and live oaks of the South as it is under the pines and firs of the Pacific coast, there will always be political war between the sections, too serious and sincere to be quenched by the annual blatherskite and bouquets of Memorial day.

The conflict is as irrepressible as that between slavery and freedom. There will be no real political peace between the sections until freedom of speech and action at the polls is as perfectly assured under the palmetto as under the northern pine, because without this the country loses all the dividend worth declaring or claiming on her awful investment.

THE NEWSPAPER.

The Boston Herald has been submitting a series of questions to Massachusetts' statesmen on the use of "money in politics." The replies were very interesting, and none were more so than that received from ex-Governor John D. Long. In his answer to the query, "What is necessary to be done to have our political campaigns become campaigns of reason?" he writes the following on the influence of the newspaper:

> The press is already the most efficient element in our political campaign. It reaches thousands where the platform reaches only a few. It has always seemed to me that the responsibility of the press in American politics is of the highest, and I should be glad to see a public sentiment which would encourage those who manage the press to maintain the high standard of argument and advocacy which I am sure they themselves prefer. Our people are a reading people, and their reading is practically the newspaper. There is no other agency which can be made so usefully powerful in shaping political opinion. It has been a favorite notion of mine for some years that it would be well to spend less money in holding political meetings and more in articles in newspapers and in their broadcast distribution throughout the community. I should like to see every day a copy of a well-conducted paper on the side of my party put into the hands of every voter in the commonwealth. Public meetings are of great value occasionally; but the constant, steady dripping of the newspaper is of marvelous influence. I think the time will come when the political managers will adopt the plan I have suggested. It is a plan which involves plain, straightforward appeals to the reason, and which would reach the intelligence of every citizen in the quiet of his own home.

An invasion of caterpillars appalled farmers and paralyzed railroad business in the northern part of Maine a few weeks ago. The woods for vast distances literally swarmed with the gray, creeping things, and the wheels of the cars spun round and round upon the reeking, slippery rails, unable to catch on and move the trains, though powerful engines puffed and labored in front and rear. A more disgusting raid, by a more voracious horde can scarcely be imagined. Grasshoppers are bad enough, and greedy enough, but they do not inspire the disgust that waits upon creeping things, while the task of fighting them is not more hopeless than that of exterminating the caterpillars. Where these creatures came from in that high latitude, where the frost has but just let go its hold upon the ground, is a question that is puzzling the searcher after cause; how shall they be gotten rid of is one which the dismayed viewer of effect is seriously pondering. In the meantime, hundreds of thousands of the survivors of the wriggling army, of which tens of thousands have been slain, have quietly spun their tents in the trees and gone into the recruiting business, leaving vain man to his speculations regarding insect life, its cause and effect.

L. H. Wakefield, formerly of Oregon, now has a fruit orchard in California of 140 acres. Talking with an Oregon friend he remarked that people supposed a bearing orchard held at high valuation when priced at $300 or $400 an acre, but to pay $100 an acre for wild land and prepare it well and plant and cultivate trees to good bearing condition would call for nearly that outlay of capital as principal and interest. It is not possible here in Oregon to prepare land and plant and cultivate trees and hold an orchard in good bearing at less than $300 an acre. There may be as much profit in orcharding in Oregon as in California, no doubt, but a fruit-farm is considered worth twice as much money there as here, because people here have not become used to such valuation. An acre in trees, in full bearing, should produce $200 worth of cured fruit, and it would be a very high figure to say the cost of producing, curing and marketing was one-half.

Is the fear that royalty is tottering to its fall in England well founded? The apprehension with which this question is met is turned into a cold shudder of certainty at the announcement, by the London correspondent of the New York World, that the time-honored office of "master of the buckhounds" together with those of the "huntsmen and whippers in" is about to be abolished. There is still hope for royalty, however, since the "barge master," the "keeper of the swans," the "heriditary grand almoner," the "heriditary grand falconer" and the "groom of the robes" are still on the list of the court functionaries that help to make pompous display of the greatness position of Victoria Regina, and bleed the loyal taxpayers of her realm.

THE OREGONIAN desires to direct public attention in Portland to a letter by Mr. N. J. Levinson on the topic, "Shall Portland Help Seattle?" In this letter the exact situation is set forth. Portland should help Seattle, and should extend that help in such manner as not to oblige Seattle to ask for it. This, as a proud and spirited city, she never will do. Nevertheless, a sum of money sent to Seattle from Portland could be used and would be used to help needy ones, and the sum that Portland sends should not be a small one. Mr. Levinson writes from personal observation and full acquaintance with the situation at Seattle, and his letter should be heeded.

Fully to understand the location of Alaska, one should digest the following paragraph from the Scientific American:

> To one whose attention has never been called to the fact, it seems rather surprising that San Francisco is on the meridian that divides the possessions of the United States into equal parts. The Alaskan archipelago extends as far to the west of San Francisco as Maine is east of it. We are, furthermore, not apt to realize that the coast line of Alaska exceeds that of the United States, and that its territory is equal in extent to the portion of the United States east of the Mississippi river.

A speed of ninety-two miles an hour was recently attained by a locomotive on the Reading railroad. The following comparisons may aid to a comprehension of what a tremendous pace this is:

> At a speed of a mile in thirty-nine seconds a locomotive would cover 135 feet a second. This is faster than Ewing can throw, faster than almost any creature, bird, beast, or fish can move; faster than the wind, unless it rush at its maddest speed; faster than an arrow's flight, and approaches the speed of projectiles of such high velocity that their path through the air is invisible.

A good deal of fun is made of Elliott F. Shepard, proprietor of the New York Mail and Express; but when it comes to practical philanthropy he and his family are no sluggards. Their names went down on a list for relief of the sufferers in Pennsylvania last Monday, in this:

> The Mail and Express, $5000; Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt, $3000; Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, $2000; Miss Edith Shepard, $100; Miss Alice V. Shepard, $100; Elliott F. Shepard, jr., $100; Mrs. Marguerite Shepard, $100; making a total of $10,400.

The Louisiana Lottery Company comes before the people of that state with an offer to assume the state debt of $12,000,000 for an extension of their license for fifty years. Incredible as it may seem, the proposition is seriously considered and probably will be accepted.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSION CASE.

The railroad commission case will be argued to-day at Salem before the supreme court. The points upon which the case will probably be decided is the one raised by the governor in his veto message, in which he denied the right of the legislature to pass a law creating offices, and at the same time appointing officers to fill them, claiming that the appointing power was an executive and not a legislative function. At the same time that Governor Pennoyer raised that point in his veto message to the Oregon legislature, Governor Hovey, of Indiana, raised the same points in several veto messages to the legislature of that state. In both states the issue has drifted into the courts, but with more speed in Indiana. The supreme court of that state has recently decided in two separate cases which have been before it that "the power to appoint to office is not a legislative function, but belongs to the executive department," and that "the legislature may provide by law for the appointment of all officers not provided for in the constitution, but the appointing power must be lodged somewhere in the executive department." The constitution of Indiana in regard to the distribution of power is exactly the same as that of Oregon, while it has one provision not found in ours, which declares that "all officers whose appointment is not otherwise provided for in this constitution, shall be chosen in such manner as now is or hereafter may be provided by law," and yet, in spite of this provision, which is more favorable to legislative appointment than any in the Oregon constitution, the supreme court held that the legislature could not appoint officers to fill offices created by it.

SHALL PORTLAND AID SEATTLE?

PORTLAND, June 9.

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

No small number of men have asked me to-day whether, in view of Seattle's refusal to ask for aid, it is Portland's duty to contribute to the relief of the stricken city. I beg the privilege of your columns to repeat publicly what I have said several times privately.

No city in the world can lose $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 without some one suffering. I believe that Seattle at this time scarcely appreciates her loss. It is not reasonable to suppose that her well-to-do citizens have capital enough to stand the constant drains on their purses until such time as business has resumed its accustomed channels. Their spirit is unconquerable, but their wealth is not unlimited. The universal feeling in Seattle is that they will not appear in the eyes of the world as beggars. They want whatever contributions will come to come as free offerings. This was the sentiment unmistakably voiced at the great mass meeting in the armory the morning after the fire.

The authorities of Seattle have not asked for aid, but the governor of Washington, officially, has made an appeal for them. The mayor of Seattle does not decline aid. He telegraphs Mr. C. H. Dodd, of this city: "Our sincerest gratitude is felt for your generous assistance. The relief committee will be on hand to receive your kindly donation." The editorial note in this morning's OREGONIAN puts the matter in its true light:

> Seattle is not a mendicant, and does not wish to appear as one. The manner in which assistance is offered has much to do with the manner in which it is received. It would have been well to raise a sum of money and send it to Seattle, with a request to the authorities of the city to use it to assist their poor, of whom undoubtedly there are a good many. Of course Seattle, with her pluck and public spirit, will take care of them; but help, tendered without requiring Seattle to ask for it, would have been judicious and no doubt well received.

Fairly familiar with the situation of Seattle and the spirit of her people; thoroughly familiar with the spirit of Portland; I have no hesitancy in saying that it is the duty of Portland to contribute to Seattle's relief to the limit of her ability. I do not assume to speak for a stricken city, but merely give my individual views.—N. J. LEVINSON.

NOTES OF PERSONS.

Rosa Bonheur has nearly reached the 70th mile post in her life journey, but she still vigorously wields the brush.

Jeff Davis celebrated his 81st birthday last Monday. The occasion appears to have been neglected by his friends in the North.

Mrs. Custer, widow of the general, will spend the summer at her cottage in Pennsylvania, where she is engaged upon a new book.

Mr. Gladstone's golden wedding will be celebrated July 25. The occasion will be honored in great style by his family and friends.

Lord Randolph Churchill's American wife has enlisted, in the ranks of the English women arrayed against the woman suffrage movement.

Abraham Lincoln once made a joke about the weakness of his secretary of state. "I think you must be a member of the Episcopal church," he said to a visitor. "You swear so much like Seward."

Abraham Shearer of Canada concluded to run away from his home and wife. When he reached the train the first person he encountered was Mrs. Shearer, who had been simultaneously siezed with the same notion.

Howard Crouch, a young man of New Brunswick, N. J., aspired to be a swell. So he ate half a pound of dried apples and drank four glasses of ice water. The doctors saved his life by hard work and powerful emetics.

Mr. Amasa Sprague, elder brother of the late Governor William Sprague of Rhode Island, and once the owner of $10,000,000, has just accepted an election to the office of sheriff of Kent county in that state, an office worth $300 or $400 a year.

Harold P. Brown, the electrician, who is in charge of the arrangements for carrying out the law for the execution of the death penalty by electricity in New York, is a slender, blond young man, with a pleasing expression of countenance and an almost perpetual smile.

Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, nee Endicott, is much disgusted with the freedom which pertains to conversation in what are considered the most select circles of English society. Her Puritan blood cannot stand certain features of dinner gossip popular in London. Not long ago she left the table of a noted peeress, because of some remark which was made.

Kate Shelley, who (then a girl of 15) saved a passenger train from destruction at a wrecked railway bridge over the Des Moines river one terribly stormy night in July, 1881, is reluctantly telling the story of the deed in order to lift a mortgage from her mother's home. The railway company should buy two seats at least.

Jo Howard occasionally drops a great hunk of truth in his deluge of gossip in the New York Press, as witness: "Poor Bishop Potter finds it difficult to explain exactly what he did mean by his notorious talk in St. Paul's church. If ever a man was surprised on waking up to find himself famous it was he. The Potters have always been respectable, but it was left for Mrs. James Brown Potter and the bishop to elevate the name from the highway of repute into the upper altitudes of notoriety."

Commissioner Tanner apparently has all the courage necessary to carry out his convictions. He said the other day to a correspondent: "I shall have no regard for the condition of the surplus in the treasury in considering applications for pensions. It will be my purpose to grant all just pensions, and to do it promptly, whether our next pension appropriation bill shall be increased from $80,000,000 to $90,000,000, or from $80,000,000 to $150,000,000. The surplus can take care of itself; and those who need pensions cannot."

The Conemaugh Death Trap.

New York Evening Post.

Surely never was a death-trap more ingeniously constructed, and never did one more remorselessly accomplish its mission. Everybody is able to see where the main responsibility lies. It is admitted that the dam has been looked upon for years as unsafe. It is admitted that the dwellers of the valley have been repeatedly warned that it might give way. In fact, they had been warned so often, with no danger following the warning, that they grew indifferent to the peril, and when the alarm of the actual break came they refused to heed it. There is nothing remarkable about this; it is merely human nature. Least of all can it be cited as in any way lessening the real responsibility for the disaster. That must rest upon the persons who built and maintained the dam. They were constantly impressed with the peril which lurked in it, for, according to their own admissions, they were constantly warning the villagers. It does not lessen their responsibility a particle to say that their warnings were not heeded. On the contrary, it increases it, for there was so much the reason why they should remove the danger by the only sure way, that is, by gradually removing the dam itself.

To suspend such a stupendous body of water in such a place, and to hold it there, knowing all the time that its barriers were unsafe, is a most incredible act of foolhardiness. It would be scarcely less reckless to construct under a city a huge powder magazine, and remain content with warning the inhabitants at frequent intervals that they must keep a close watch and be ready to run at any moment, for a careless person might drop a match into the powder at any time. If such a magazine were built and if, in spite of the warnings, the city were to be destroyed, would anybody think of placing the responsibility upon the victims? The same governmental authority which would prevent the building of such a magazine ought to be able to interfere and prevent the building of such an obvious menace to human life and property as the Conemaugh dam.

Suicide of a Woman.

Big Bend Empire.

Mrs. Norris, living near Riley Gilbert's place, at Grand Coulee, died Monday morning from the effects of a pistol shot. Full particulars cannot be obtained, but it appears that she has been a patient sufferer from the abuses and neglect of a worthless husband, and chose to put an end to it rather than to be [illegible] continuance of past treatment. From the information received, there will probably be an investigation; as there are some circumstances to justify a suspicion that it was murder.

We have found no remedy for malaria, so reliable and safe as Ayer's Ague Cure. Taken according to directions, it never fails.

TLAND AND VICINITY.

SINGULAR LAMP EXPLOSION.—A rather singular lamp explosion occurred in the house of Mr. E. C. Patton, No. 128 Salmon street, at an early hour yesterday morning. Mr. Patton had gone to the ice chest in the yard for some ice for his wife, who is sick. After some ice for his wife, who is ... He placed the lamp on a corner of the chest after the lid had been raised, and was about to get a piece of ice, when he was startled by a loud report. In an instant everything was dark. Thinking that perhaps a burglar had taken a shot at him and that the light was extinguished by the report of the pistol, Mr. Patton dodged behind the chest, awaiting a second shot. The second shot, however, did not materialize, and Mr. Patton then ventured forth and the first step he took he heard a piece of glass cracking under his feet. Lighting a match, the whole mystery was explained to him. The lamp had exploded. Pieces of glass were scattered about the floor and nearly a quart of coal oil was spread over the eatables in the ice chest. The fact that the oil was not ignited by the explosion almost borders on the miraculous to think the inmates of the house.

AT THE PARK.—The City park was yesterday thronged by thousands of people. Every out-going car on the Washington street line was crowded to its utmost capacity up to a late hour in the afternoon. On some cars as high as 50 passengers were counted. These, however, were not all who visited the park, for hundreds of others went on foot and in carriages. The park presented a gay and animated appearance. People were sitting on rustic benches and on the green grass in every desirable spot, while the many little folks romped about unrestrained and amused themselves with the swings. Scores of young ladies, in some instances accompanied by gentlemen, occupied every shady nook and "ambrosial bower." In the afternoon the Marine band was stationed in the grand stand and discoursed excellent music, that was greatly enjoyed by all who were within hearing distance. An excellent programme was well carried out, and each number received a prolonged applause, which the musicians certainly deserved. It is estimated that about 4000 people visited the park during the day.

NO MERCY SHOWN.—Considerable comment is being made on the lack of sympathy shown Mr. E. O. Corson while he was lying on the back porch of the house occupied by his wife after he had attempted to commit suicide Saturday night. The bullet passing entirely through a lung, naturally produced great thirst. Though Mr. Corson appealed to the crowd standing about him, to bring him a drink of water, it was fully half an hour before the heart of any of his hearers was touched. He begged of them piteously, that if they had any touch of humanity or mercy, to bring him a little water before he died, as he believed the shot to be fatal at the time. Several in the crowd stated that Corson was insane and had a revolver, and this seemed to inspire them with fear, notwithstanding the injured man's assurances to the contrary. After the water was brought and the doctor arrived, considerable more time elapsed before he was taken away. He was refused admission to the house, though the physician requested it merely temporarily.

A MONSTER STURGEON.—The largest sturgeon ever seen in this part of the country was brought up by Otto Peters, of Deer island, to Frank C. Barnes, Saturday. It weighed 600 pounds and was eleven feet and four inches long. The largest seen here before this weighed about 300 pounds. The sight of it, displayed on the sidewalk at Third and Morrison streets, attracted a great crowd, among whom were several good, single-handed fish liars. One told about seeing a sturgeon at the Cascades which was fourteen feet long and weighed 900 pounds. But, as usual, the man who told his story first stood no show, for another fellow came to the front and told about a sturgeon he saw up in the Snake river, which was eighteen feet long and weighed 1500 pounds. And then another fellow started in to tell about a sturgeon he saw up in Alaska, but the crowd got scared for fear that lightning would strike them and all walked away, and the Alaska liar got left.

CONDITION OF MR. CORSON.—Contrary to the expectations of the attending physicians, the condition of Mr. E. O. Corson, who attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself through the right lung Saturday night, was yesterday more hopeful. It was at first thought that hemorrhage would set in, and Mr. Corson would not survive twenty-four hours. Dr. Rinehart stated yesterday evening that the chances for the injured man's recovery are much better at present than immediately after the shooting. The bullet has been located exactly. It has worked its way down about two inches from the place it was first lodged, and if no change for the worse occurs within three or four days, an incision will be made to extract it. The large sac of air at the point where the bullet lodged, has also considerably diminished in size and other symptoms are all favorable. He is perfectly rational and suffers but little pain.

NEW LAW FIRM AT SEATTLE.—Keeping pace with the pluck and promptness which surrounds it, the law firm of Stratton, Newlin & Fenton, though formed only a few days before their offices shared the common fate in the recent fire, resumed business on Saturday last at rooms 7 and 8, in Newlin block, Seattle. The long and favorable acquaintance in this state of two members of the firm, Mr. Stratton, late clerk and reporter of our supreme court, and Mr. Fenton, recently of Eugene City, will insure for them a large share of the Oregon business in their locality, while the public confidence in Mr. Newlin is indicated by his recent promotion to the office of district attorney. Those having business requiring the attention of an attorney at Seattle or elsewhere in the Third judicial district of Washington will be fortunate who secure the services of this new firm.

DEATH OF EDWARD CAMPION.—Mr. Edward Campion died at his residence in this city yesterday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock. Deceased was aged 65 years and was one of our oldest and most respected citizens. He was born in the parish of Lisdowney, Kilkenny county, Ireland, in 1833. He came to New York when a mere boy and in 1858 cast his lot in Oregon. He has resided in Oregon City and Portland up to the time of his death. He leaves a loving and devoted wife and five children—two sons and three daughters—to mourn the death of a fond husband and kind father. Funeral will take place from his late residence, No. 85 North Fifth street, Wednesday, the 12th inst., at 9 o'clock A. M. High mass will be celebrated at the Cathedral at 9. Friends of the family invited to attend. New York and San Francisco and Kilkenny (Ireland) papers please copy.

STRAWBERRY SEASON NEARLY OVER.—Strawberries during the past few days have been a drug on the market. Some dealers have sold them as low as seven and eight boxes for a quarter at retail, while the few choice lots that came in commanded but 5 cents per box. The reason is that the strawberry season is about over, and people are looking for other delicacies. What few strawberries will yet come in no doubt will command a higher price, for there are always some people who never really enjoy such a dish unless the berries are scarce and high priced.

THEY FANNED AND FANNED.—Second street, between Washington and Morrison, yesterday was the scene of fluttering of countless fans. The celestial population was out in full force, seated on boxes and benches and on the sidewalk, each armed with a fan that was plied with a zeal calculated to conquer. The average Chinaman, apparently, is as much affected by heat as any one else, and the fan is his best weapon in fighting the malaria.

STREETS WELL SPRINKLED.—The principal streets of the city presented a most refreshing appearance yesterday, having been well sprinkled down in the early part of the day. One sprinkler with four horses was sent out to the City park at 4 o'clock in the morning, and Overseer Matthews had the other ten out at the same hours on the improved streets all over town. The result was that there was much less dust around town than usual.

MARCHING ON.—Electric and steam motor and cable roads are being constructed out of the city in every direction, but the terrace road being built around the front of Hoffman's hill can be seen from almost any part of the city. A cluster of tents is located below the springs, the forerunner of the ... soon to be built around them.

FOR JOHNSTOWN.—All who desire to aid the sufferers at Johnstown, will remember the moonlight excursion Wednesday evening, leaving the Ash street dock at 8:30 P. M., and Johnson's dock, East Portland, at 8:45 P. M. Those contributing provisions will please leave them at Hall Bros.' hardware store on Fourth street, near N, East Portland, or at Dresser's grocery store, Jefferson and Third street, Portland. The steamer Bonita has been engaged, the Marine band has volunteered their services, Kohler & Chase donate the use of a piano, and quite a number of good singers have promised their help, so that a good concert may be expected. Professor Wilder, of Portland, and Professor Willard, of East Portland, will render a song, words and music of their own composition, prepared for the occasion. A full programme of the exercises will appear in Wednesday's paper.

A BADLY CUT WRIST.—As Mr. J. Watson was walking along Second street yesterday afternoon he accidentally fell into a window in the Gilsan block on Ash street and seriously cut the wrist of the right hand. He fell in such a manner that the large artery was entirely severed. Compressing the wrist as much as possible with the other hand, Mr. Watson walked up the stairs to the office of Dr. Rand, but just as he got to the door he fainted. The doctor heard the noise, and going to the door found Mr. Watson lying in the hall. The wrist was bleeding profusely. Mr. Watson was then carried into the office and the artery was tied up. Later he was taken to his home, considerably weakened from the loss of blood, but glad that the injury was not more serious.

OUR IMPORTED SONGSTERS.—The German song birds are heard from in various places in and about the city. Some of them have located in gardens in the city, where they are carefully protected. Some of the starlings are making themselves at home at the north end of town, while out around the city park and the private grounds of Donald Macleay and Mrs. H. D. Green, the pretty songsters may be heard in full force early in the morning. A number of the birds are out, in and about Riverview cemetery, and the other day, as the interment of a German lady was taking place there, a black thrush alighted in a tree near the grave and sang his sweet notes, which recalled the homes and friends of their childhood to many and brought tears to their eyes.

HE WAS GENTEELLY "CANED."—Mr. A. F. Raynor, head steward in Friemann's restaurant, was yesterday made the happy recipient of a gold-headed cane, presented to him by the employes of the restaurant, as a testimonial of their esteem and high regard for his many gentlemanly qualities of character. The occasion was the 29th anniversary of his birthday. Mr. Raynor has been with Mr. Friemann for nearly four years, and his affable and genteel ways have won for him many friends, who wish him many happy returns of the day. Louis Zunowitch, of the saloon annex, presented Mr. Raynor with an elegant mahogany writing desk.

THE EXCURSION TO-NIGHT.—The steamer Multnomah and barge will leave for the excursion up the Columbia at 8 o'clock this evening from the foot of Morrison street, instead of Alder street, as was announced in the churches yesterday. Ladies can send refreshments to Moore & Starr's office on Morrison street wharf any time during the day. The excursion is for the benefit of any sufferers by the Seattle fire who may need assistance. Persons selling tickets will report at the office of the Board of City Charities this morning to have districts assigned them.

MINE NEAR LA CAMAS.—A gold and silver mine, lately discovered in the hills back of La Camas, in which D. H. Stearns and others are interested, has been bonded to Messrs. C. W. Knowles, J. Bourne, jr., and others for $10,000. A gang of men have been sent out to develop the mine, which has furnished some very fine ore and promises to be very valuable.

DESIGNATED SIGNAL OFFICER.—The following special order has been issued by General Gibbon: First Lieutenant Leonard A. Lovering, Fourth infantry, is designated as signal officer of the department, and will receive from First Lieutenant Charles H. Clark, ordnance department, all signal stores and property for which he is accountable.

BATTERY A MUSTERED IN.—Battery A, O. N. G., which disbanded recently, has reorganized and was mustered in by Aide-de-Camp Murphy, of Brigadier-General Siglin's staff, Saturday night. The battery has forty-five members. Thomas Adams was elected captain, Ward Stevens first lieutenant and L. A. Bowman second lieutenant.

LIGHT LOSS AT SEATTLE.—The stockholders of the Pacific Fire Insurance Company will be pleased to notice the light loss for their company, as reported in THE DAILY OREGONIAN of the 8th inst., being probably less than $5000 out of twenty-two policies in force at the time of the fire, on twelve of which losses are said to have occurred.

FOURTH QUARTERLY MEETING.—The fourth quarterly meeting of Washington circuit, Oregon conference United Brethren in Christ, will be held with the Liberty class, nine miles from Portland on the Taylor ferry road, June 22 and 23. Bishop H. J. Becker, of Ohio, is expected to be present. All are cordially invited.

LAND SOLD.—Ten acres of land belonging to the estate of Bigne and Mauciet, and situated on the section line road, adjoining B. Simon's vineyard, was sold at the courthouse door Saturday for $2020 per acre, Mr. John Kiernan being the purchaser. Six miles east a tract was sold a few days since for $125.

TEMPORARILY FILLED.—The chuck holes along Multnomah and Hood streets have been filled temporarily with clay, which, being well wetted down, has become smooth, and makes the streets much more safe and comfortable for driving over. The streets will be thoroughly repaired as soon as possible.

WORK PROGRESSING.—The brick work on the new wing to the county courthouse is nearly completed to the top of the lower story, which is to be an annex to the county jail. The west wall is entirely up to the top of the iron window bars, and the east wall will be finised in one or two days more.

A TENT THEATER.—The lumber yard at the corner of Third and Yamhill streets is a thing of the past. The ground has been leased, a high board fence put around it, and there is to be a museum and theater there, each in a big tent, conducted on a popular plan, at popular prices.

THE PUBLIC WILL not forget that on to-morrow and Wednesday evenings Colonel L. F. Copeland, the celebrated lecturer, will entertain the people at Taylor street M. E. church. This evening he will lecture on "The Future of the Republic."

PROMPT WORK.—A letter from Seattle mentions the fact that the Northwest and the Pacific Fire Insurance Companies, of Portland, are already paying losses, and that all claims against them are being paid by sight drafts.

BUILDING BOOM.—From the number of seaside houses contracted for at "Oceanside" it will not be long before that beautiful resort will be well populated. For particulars, apply to J. D. Hart, No. 86 Second street.

CONVALESCING.—The many friends of Miss Dr. Myra Brown, who was taken to the Good Samaritan hospital with typhoid fever several weeks since, will be glad to hear that she is convalescing.

OKLAHOMA ECLIPSED.

The Opening of the Nez Perce Reservation in the Near Future.

Over Half a Million Acres Which Will Furnish Homes for Three Thousand Five Hundred Settlers.

LEWISTON, Idaho, June 6, 1889.

Nothing of greater importance to the welfare of the Northwest interior, not even the building of the Northern Pacific railroad, has ever occurred than the recent action of the interior department in taking the initial steps towards allotting the Nez Perce Indians, lands in severalty, and throwing open the balance of that great reservation to public settlement. I append herewith a close estimate, compiled from official sources, of facts and figures as follows:

Indian population	1,500
Heads of families, 300, 160 acres each	48,000
Single adults, 600, 80 acres each	48,000
Under age, 600, 40 acres each	24,000
For pasture lands	30,000
For timber lands	30,000
Total allotment to Indians	140,000
	Acres.
Area of reserve, 32 townships	745,680
Deduct Indian allotments	140,000
Leaving a total of	563,680

Acres subject to settlement by white people making homes of 160 acres each, for 3523 actual settlers.

The process to be pursued, as near as I can learn, is as follows: Miss Fletcher, an expert from the Indian bureau, is already on the reservation to allot the Indians their lands, and so confident does the department feel that this lady will be successful in her mission, that Mr. Edson Briggs, of Pomeroy, has been detailed to survey the allotments as fast as they are made. At the conclusion of this work, a commission will be appointed to treat with the Indians for the cession of the remaining area to the United States. The lands thus secured by treaty will thereupon become a part of the public domain, subject, however, to no entry or filing except homesteads. These homesteads must be resided upon for five years. The commutation clause of the homestead law does not apply to homestead entries made on these lands. There must be five years of actual residence thereon to secure title to a homestead of 160 acres of the finest land in the United States. I have stated the law relating to the disposal of these lands thus explicitly, so that none may come to this latest and best Oklahoma but those who are prepared to live up to its requirements, and for the further reason that none may say they were lured here under false pretenses.

Within the last few days fully 100 intending settlers have arrived here, and during the interval of waiting for the opening of the reservation have located pre-emption claims on the beautiful prairies on Craig's mountain, which are cut in twain by the reservation line. These people are wise in their generation, for, instead of living in idleness during the year that must elapse before the authorities can complete the allotment and treaty, they are securing title to a quarter-section of land as fine as ever a crow flew over, and which is always valuable property, and which, moreover, affords them a home convenient to the promised land where they can keep posted on the development and progress of the work on the reserve. When the bars are let down these people will be on the spot to locate their homesteads on the most fruitful soil on the continent. What these people are doing others can do. The great prairies bordering Mason creek, Wilton creek and Lawyer's canyon afford homes for hundreds more, homes where the soil is wonderfully prolific, well watered and timbered, and where the climate is so genial that stock pull through the winter without feed.

But it is not alone in the opening of the 500,000 acres of surplus land on the reservation, though that in itself is no small item, that the beneficial effect will be felt, for it must be understood that the boundary lines of the reservation are so located that they have practically kept under lock and key the best part of Idaho territory, by commanding the outlet to the whole of the great Clearwater basin and the western slope of the Bitter Root mountains—a region as large as a score of European empires, and dowered with an infinite variety and profusion of nature's richest gifts. Commencing six miles above Lewiston the reservation has a water front on both sides of the Clearwater river and its tributaries of 120 miles. The main river—the principal artery of access to the back country for 200 miles—has been closed by the reservation, and it has been practically sealed territory in the possession of an Indian tribe. This tributary country extends from Cœur d'Alene on the north to Salmon river on the south, and is a region rich in prairie, meadow and pasture lands. The western slope of the Bitter Root range contain the largest and best forests of timber in the Northwest, while indications of the existence of great mineral zones have been found. It is all, however, practically a terra incognita, and even the number and sources of the principal tributaries of the great Clearwater itself are not definitely known. With the opening of the reservation wagon roads will be built, and the gradual development of this new country will reveal sources of wealth undreamed of, because unknown, in these primeval solitudes. It is a vast country. Take Idaho county, in the heart of the territory. It is 200 miles from north to south, and an equal distance from east to west. The main Clearwater flows along its northern boundary, while the tortuous Salmon river drains through its heart. The waters of Snake river wash its western base, and the tall summits of the Bitter Root divide, rearing their pine and cedar fringed crests in the sky, form its eastern boundary and divide it from Montana. This vast region is occupied by only 4000 people and its taxable property is less than $1,000,000. Its principal settlement is the Camas prairie country, my own beautiful home, and Camas prairie is really only a little strip of good land adjoining the Nez Perce reservation which the Indians somehow overlooked when they selected their reserve. In this little strip 2500 people have made their homes. It is without exception the most prosperous agricultural community in the Northwest, and it shows evidences of improvement and material progress that are really startling to those who know the circumstances which have attended its settlement and occupation. Every pound of its freight has to be hauled over the Craig's mountain from Lewiston, a distance of sixty miles. A bloody Indian war once raged here and the graves of seventy-five victims are still kept green and their memories cherished by their surviving relatives and friends. Houses and stores were burned, property destroyed and stock driven off, nor has the government ever paid a cent for the damages then incurred. But in spite of these cruelties and spoliations the sturdy settlers remained, and in twelve years of untiring industry and deprivation they have covered the scars of war with the fruits of peace, and the landscape to-day presents to the eye as beautiful a pastoral picture as ever was gazed on by the infinite in the loveliest vales of Judea. What has been done on the twelve townships of Camas prairie will be repeated again with infinitely less of hardship and toil and far less expenditure of money and muscle by the newcomers who are fortunate enough to locate a homestead claim on the surplus lands of the reservation, soon to be thrown open.

It is a safe estimate to say that fully three-fourths of the reservation is arable land, and that the remaining fourth is valuable for its timber, or for minerals, or for grazing purposes. It is principally prairie land, with a gentle slope from the foothills of Craig's mountain to the Clearwater. It is a country as large and as fertile as the great Palouse region, and had the reservation never existed it would now contain a larger population, with more products, enterprise and civilization than anything the Palouse can boast.

Such is a brief, but imperfect, picture of this new Oklahoma, a region which has hitherto been monopolized, to the detriment of the whole country, by Indians, and now, happily, soon to be brought under the domination of Caucasian energy. There need be no fear that the allotment will not be made, for these Indians perfectly well understand the situation, and have long been ready and willing to accept the severalty system. For many years they have abandoned their tribal relations and lived without a chief. Many of them are citizens by naturalization. Others are ordained ministers of the Presbyterian church, and the tribe can show more members who can read and write the English language than any other tribe outside the Indian nation. They are by no means blanket Indians, but honest, reliable, enterprising, industrious and loyal.

Those people who are coming from the Eastern states, to find homes in the far Northwest, should not fail to come to Lewiston and Camas prairie, for here they are most likely to be suited. The Nez Perce country is somewhat isolated, it is true, but it is in such localities that the best public lands that yet remain are to be found, and the Lewiston land district offers more of such than many more pretentious offices. Come to Lewiston, come to Camas Prairie, oh, ye homeseekers, and see for yourselves that we have soil, climate, products and resources as good as the best, while the very newness and extent of our country gives you opportunities and advantages for acquiring fortunes that older localities cannot offer, and which will be greatly increased by the opening up of the last remaining piece of frontier in the United States.

GRAY'S HARBOR.

Prospects in the Immediate Future for Two Railroads to Puget Sound.

MONTESANO, W. T., June 4.

It is old to say that all who come to Gray's harbor are "delighted with the country," for that is true of the whole of Western Washington but it seems especially true of this town and its surroundings.

The great mill combination that enforces an idleness of all mills one day in each week, one week in each month and one month in each year, is exercising a rather depressing influence on building in all the harbor towns, as I presume it is in those of the Sound. Of course lumber is yet rather cheap, as compared with the prices paid further East, but here where timber is so very plentiful, where logging is so cheaply done and mills with great capacity at all convenient points, it seems to me that a fair competition and not close combination should regulate the price of lumber to home builders. A good many people who are willing these sawmill owners should be "protected" against the competition of Columbia lumbermen, are beginning to think it rather unkind for the "protected" mill owners to take refuge behind this tariff law, and raise prices to an unreasonable profit by combinations. These gentlemen should read the story about the fellow who killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

The contract for the extension of the Puget Sound & Gray's Harbor railroad from Summit to Montesano having been awarded to Mr. Gibbon, its early completion has passed the realms of speculation or conjecture. The first section from Summit to Elma has been sub-let to Mr. Fitzgerald, who has already established three camps, and has actively employed 300 men, with an intention to increase the number to 800 the present week. Mr. Gibbon, the contractor, will personally superintend the section from Elma to Montesano and a strong force will be put to work within ten days, and the whole work will be finished in September.

The financial backers of the scheme were here last evening in the interest of the Olympia & Gray's harbor railroad. The gentlemen were very eloquent in their brilliant flashes of silence on the railroad question, but enough was heard to prove that the tedious ride by stage was not taken for health or pleasure. I don't know just how much the people retained for themselves in the negotiations with the other company, but it may safely be asserted that any railroad enterprise with "serious intentions" will be met with a spirit of liberality.

A gentleman with abundant means and experience has begun to clear the grounds for a fine sawmill and moulding, sash and door factory on the river front above the wharf. The mill will have about 80,000 daily capacity. This mill will have some advantages, one of which is saving 50 cents per 1000 on boomage.

Our street railway has met with an obstacle in the way of a remonstrance against the charter. With doubts as to the merits of the objection, I refrain from scolding, though I regret a lack of harmony in all enterprises that promise to benefit the town.

There is considerable activity in building and a great movement is expected in the early future. As there is a strong desire among our people to build a fine city and also develop the country, our people seem determined to keep prices in real estate down, until the merits of our city and country are fully known to the outside world.

Of course present holders know that within a few months a substantial boom will carry prices sky high, but those buying now are buying at prices that insure enormous returns within a year.

LIABILITY OF POWDER EXPLOSIONS.

A Correspondent Who Thinks That Portland Is Menaced by Such Danger.

A correspondent writing to THE OREGONIAN under date of Portland, June 8, says:

"What is everybody's business is nobody's business." Your dispatches show that many individuals about Johnstown have for a long time thought there was danger in the South Fork reservoir, and so publicly expressed themselves, but nothing was done to abate the nuisance.

Perhaps some people will be surprised to learn that Portland and vicinity are menaced with a similar peril.

Ten or twenty years ago, the dealers in powder built their magazines along the river bank above the city. Probably, because the Macadam road was then the only good road along the river. There are three such magazines on the south bank of the Willamette river, within three miles of THE OREGONIAN office.

The powder comes principally by vessels, and is loaded upon barges below the city and then towed up the river, through the city, to the magazines. When large shipments are made, it is sometimes brought down again by barge or steamer, but generally it is hauled through the city on wagon or truck to the boat or freight depot.

A barge will sometimes thus carry several hundred tons of powder past the city water front, being towed by a steamer alongside. A truck will sometimes haul a ton down Front street. A large portion of the powder is of the nitro-glycerine varieties, called dynamite, giant, etc., which are about ten times as powerful as an equal weight of common charcoal blasting powder.

It seems to me that the risks thus incurred are out of all reason. If a truck load should explode in Front street, it is safe to say that a block on each side would be knocked down or so shattered they would have to come down, and a good many lives lost. So, if one of these magazines exploded, it would destroy many houses and lives, for people are living all around the magazines, and several thousand persons drive over the White house road past them every fine day. They are practically in the city. But if one of these barge loads explodes, say about the foot of Stark street, half the business part of Portland will be in ruins, and the scenes will rival those at Johnstown.

The remedy is for the grand jury to make a thorough investigation of this source of danger to life and property. No one wishes to interfere with the business, or inconvenience those carrying it on, but they should be required to store their powder below the city, and not allowed to transport it in such enormous quantities along the streets or upon the river, where an explosion would work such a disaster.

Where It Is Safest.

Chambers' Journal.

In 1882 the chairman of the London & Northwestern stated that there had not been a single passenger killed on their line within the previous three years. Sir John Hawkshaw, speaking of safety on railroads generally, said "that only one passenger was injured for every 4,000,000 miles traveled; and on an average a person may travel 100,000 miles each year for forty years, and the chances are of not receiving the slightest injury." Again, Sir E. Watkin "maintained that railway traveling was safer than eating, because it is a fact that more people choke themselves in England than are killed on all the railways of the United Kingdom."

A Cure for Chronic Diarrhœa.

Mrs. E. Gleason, of Salem, Dent county, Mo., writes as follows: "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy cured me of chronic diarrhœa after years of standing, when it seemed I could live no longer. I was growing so weak. I had tried several doctors in this state and several in Iowa; but they could do nothing for me. I was finally induced to try a bottle of your medicine. After using three bottles of it I was entirely cured. I cannot say enough in its praise. I wish that every family knew the worth of it as I do, and I am sure they would never do without it." THE PORTLAND REAL ESTATE COMPANY, 4½ WASHINGTON ST.

THE WALLA WALLA VALLEY

A Review of the Inducements It Offers to Immigrants.

The Garden Spot of the Great Inland Empire, and the City a Trade Center of a Rich and Growing Section.

WALLA WALLA, June 8.

Business in the city of Walla Walla seems to be improving all the time, and our whole country looks promising and progressive.

Our country has never had a crop failure in unpropitious seasons, but heaven has smiled upon us this year most bountifully. The greatest crop of wheat will be harvested this fall that ever has been produced. Our orchards are loaded with all kinds of fruits; our crop of berries is immense; our strawberries are going as far East as St. Paul and Chicago, and all along the Northern Pacific line. From 10,000 to 15,000 pounds of fruit and vegetables are daily being shipped to Eastern Oregon, Northern Washington and Eastward.

As I read in a former communication, the day is not far distant when the Walla Walla valley will be one vast garden, orchard and vineyard, divided up into ten, and less acre tracts, and thousands will have comfortable homes and beautiful surroundings, where there are only hundreds now. It is only a question of time. The great advantages of this county for gardening, fruit raising, etc., will, in a short time, be fully appreciated. Those who secure a foothold now in one of these garden tracts will be taking time by the forelock; will make an investment that never will be regretted.

Property in and around Walla Walla has increased the last year from 25 to 50 per cent; prices are constantly, slowly advancing; our own people are investing here rather than buy in our boomed towns at inflated prices. Walla Walla in five years will have a population of at least 15,000 people. It is a natural trade center of a vast country, and has been ever since the county was settled. I remember well when our merchants wholesaled goods into Idaho, Eastern Oregon, Montana, and all over the Columbia basin.

Please permit me, in addition to what has been said as to the great wealth of the gardening and horticultural resources of our valley, to say a few words as to its healthfulness. Owing to the very high altitude, exceeding evenness of temperature, dry, sunshiny weather in winter, and pure mountain and spring water, this is one of the healthiest countries in the world, especially so to those who are troubled with throat and lung difficulties. I believe there is no part of California where a person predisposed to consumption can live so long. I have seen during the fifteen years I have resided here, many invalids who have come to our country in search of health—who were walking skeletons, with consumption, when they arrived—and several of them became comparatively well in our healthful climate. For lung and throat diseases, hereditary consumption, asthma, etc., there is not a more healthful place to reside in the world. Let this fact be known and established throughout the United States—and it is true beyond controversy—and Walla Walla will, on this alone, receive a boom equal to that of Los Angeles. For thousands are every year dying in the Eastern states with consumption, brought on by sudden changes, cold weather, impure water and other causes which are not experienced in our beautiful climate.

The territory of Washington, soon to become one of the proud states of the Union, possesses quite as many natural advantages as any territory that has ever been admitted into the sisterhood of states. We have all the natural elements of wealth; we have on the Pacific slope the finest timber in the world, and enough to supply the world; we have, too, mountains of coal and iron undeveloped, enough to supply a nation; we have in the northeastern part of our territory rich, inexhaustible veins of gold, silver and other metals, and in the southeastern part we have the great Walla Walla country, unequaled on the face of the earth in the productions of agriculture. Well may such a territory attract attention, and receive a rush of immigrants. For Washington will be worthy the noble name she bears, for in time she will become one of the richest states of our Union.

Oregon and Washington ought to stand together like twin sisters, and when the representatives of our new state are elected and sent to Washington, the representatives of both should join together to promote the great interests of the Northwest.

Most especially are the interests of Eastern Oregon and the Walla Walla country closely interwoven. Walla Walla is the market and place of business of a considerable part of that country, and Walla Walla always has been and is yet, to a certain extent, tributary to Portland; and a great part of the wealth of the O. R. & N. Co., has been derived from the great agricultural wealth of that fine country; and had that company, instead of imposing high transportation and exorbitant rates, tried to help and build up and advertise the country, the farmers might still have been the solid friends of that company, and would not now be giving subsidies to another company to build opposition lines. The managers of that company in the last ten years did not seem to realize that the people had rights which the railroad companies some time would have to respect.

Walla Walla takes 300 copies of THE OREGONIAN more than any other town in Oregon outside of Portland—which speaks well for the intelligence of her people, as well as the neighborly, sympathetic feeling of her people toward the metropolis of our sister state. We recognize the fact that while we may not have a metropolis in our own state that will rival San Francisco, Portland will, from its surroundings and great advantages, become a city of great importance. For there is room for several great cities in the great Northwest.

Measures have been taken to celebrate our national birthday in Walla Walla. There never was a year that the people of our territory had more occasion to be thankful for the blessings received than this, the year of the birth of the great state of Washington, when she will take her proud position as one of the sovereign states of the greatest sovereigns of the world—where the will of 64,000,000 of people governs.

The street railway has been built, all ready for the cars, about a mile and a half, and still the good work goes on.

Two additional savings banks are being organized, and the stock has nearly all been subscribed. Improvements are going on everywhere, and our streets are full of business. Strangers are here, looking after real estate, and all are pleased with our prospects.

NOTES FROM WESTON.

WESTON, Or., June 7.

Mr. F. Riffle, chief engineer of the O. & W. T., returned yesterday from Engineer Shaw's camp, four miles from the summit. In an interview we were informed that the work of surveying for the O. & W. T. road to the Grand Ronde valley is progressing rapidly.

Engineer Shaw expects to reach Union in two weeks. Stakes have been set within four miles of Elgin. The Looking Glass pass has been abandoned as impossible; but Engineer Shaw has found a route that is satisfactory and of a very fair grade.

In answer to the question as to what effect the new agreement made between the Union and Northern Pacific roads would have on the further extension of the Hunt system, Mr. Riffle replied that it would have no effect whatever. From this we inferred that the work of extending the Hunt system would proceed wherever contemplated, and where agreements between the people were not reached. The surveyors obtain nearly all of their supplies from this point yet.

The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company have a man in the mountains east of here, hunting for their old survey, run by Zanier several years ago. We presume that the object is to to compare their old line with the one made by the O. & W. T.

We are expecting a representative of the Pacific Coast Elevator Company here this week to locate the site for their elevator, which is to be built soon.

The wheat crop that will be shipped from Weston this season will be the largest that has ever been in the history of this section. No damage of any kind has occurred to the growing grain, although in and about Helix and the Cold Spring country the hot wind has burned some fields badly. The indication now is for rain, which will be of benefit to the crop, although there is no great need of rain at present.

DR. DARRIN RETURNED.

What the Astoria Pioneer Thinks of Him.

Dr. Darrin's sojourn in Astoria has expired and he has returned to the head office in Portland, where he is permanently located.

The visit of Dr. Darrin to Astoria is filled with interest in many particulars. When he first arrived he advertised very extensively, and the cry went up that there was some catch in it. Then he cured one case that was considered hopeless, and a surprise was felt. After that the very worst cases in existence were given him as a test by all doubters. If he cures this one I will believe it, the doubters echoed, and after treatment the patient was as sound as a dollar. Then they gave him another test case, and another, and so on, but all with the same result. He effected a cure in nearly every instance. Then the doctor's terrible rush of patients began, and the stream has been growing larger every day, numbering some of the best people in the state. A visit to the offices of Drs. Darrin is certainly a curiosity as well as a wonder. Patients are carried one day, and in a week's time, instead of being carried there, they walk up the stairs as sprightly as young boys. What there is about them is certainly mysterious, for they have performed most remarkable cures, as the testimonials that we have heretofore published have proved, and we give the names of the following as further proof:

Andrew Anderson, Port Townsend, W. T., cross eyed from paralysis of the outer muscles of the eye; cured by one operation.

F. P. Sawtell, Independence, W. T., dyspepsia and kidney complaint, pronounced Bright's disease by some physicians; restored.

Mrs. L. K. Harman's son, of Vancouver, W. T., cured of a loathsome case of catarrh and polypus of the nose; also her daughter of a tumor.

C. Hiese, seven miles west of Fulton, Or., liver and kidney trouble, dizziness and pains over the whole system; restored to health.

Charles Brugger, Reedville, Or., almost total blindness from the effects of measles; restored after other doctors said he was past cure.

Mrs. L. Mattoon, East Portland, Or., catarrh, bronchitis, nervousness and sleepless nights and loss of flesh; cured and gained twelve pounds.

Mrs. A. J. Quentel, 1361 Railroad street, Tacoma, W. T., stoppage of tear duct causing tears to overflow down the cheeks; cured by one operation.

Mrs. Mevie Gebfort, Seattle, W. T., boy 5 years old, deaf since 16 months old, discharging ears and catarrh; entirely cured after several treatments.

The Doctor's Place of Business.

Dr. Darrin can be consulted free at 235 Fifth street, corner of Main, Portland. Office hours, from 10 to 5 o'clock daily; evenings, 7 to 8; Sundays, 10 to 12. All curable chronic diseases, loss of manhood, blood taints, syphilis, gleet, gonorrhœa, stricture, spermatorrhœa, seminal weakness, or loss of desire of sexual power, in man or woman, catarrh and deafness, are confidentially and successfully treated. Cures of private diseases guaranteed, and never published in the papers. Circulars sent free. Most cases can receive home treatment after a visit to the doctor's office.

☞ The doctor has no representatives practicing in the state, as has recently been discovered in Benton county. All persons taking the name of Dr. Darrin are frauds.

GISELE'S CAPRICE.

Translated from the French for the Epoch.

The salon was lighted by a single lamp, which shed a soft radiance throughout the room. It was simply furnished, but was adorned with a profusion of flowers and plants. Three persons were in the salon—Mme. de Balny, Gisele, her daughter, and the latter's betrothed, Robert de Gilis, who was soon to be her husband.

Gisele, who was in her 18th year, was very beautiful. She was a natural blonde. Her smile had the double advantage of showing pretty teeth and two charming little dimples in her rosy cheeks. Her eyes were very handsome, but their glance was somewhat imperious. She was dressed in a robe of soft, white, clinging material that set off to advantage her girlish beauty.

Gisele was an only daughter. She had been reared by an indulgent mother, her father having died during her infancy. Although Mme. de Balny's income was barely sufficient to support herself and her daughter she managed to gratify Gisele's every whim, and her whims were many, for she was a child of caprice.

Many admirers paid suit to Gisele, but she smiled on none until Robert de Gilis threw himself at her feet. In Robert, Gisele found her supreme triumph, for by his unselfish devotion he gave her the greatest satisfaction a woman can have—to be loved for her beauty, which was Gisele's only dower. Robert had every qualification to be desired in a lover. He was 25 years old, handsome, manly, and very wealthy.

While Mme. de Balny was working at her embroidery and Robert and Giesle were holding a tender conversation the door of the salon was opened and George Langle was announced.

"Good evening, my dear madame," said the newcomer, as he entered, bowing to the mistress of the house.

"Ah, good evening, my dear Langle," said Mme. de Balny, welcoming the guest. "This is, indeed, an agreeable surprise."

When the others had welcomed him, turning to Robert, Langle said:

"I knew that I would find you here, and that is why I called so late, wishing to have you present to second a proposition which I desire to make to these ladies."

"Ah! tell us. What is it?" exclaimed Gisele.

"My mother's cottage at Saint Cloud has just been put in order for the summer," replied Langle. "We are going to drive there to-morrow morning, and she desires that you will accompany us. We shall leave Paris in good season, so as to avoid the heat of the day. Breakfast will await us on arrival. We will spend the warm part of the day swinging in our hammocks and gossiping under the elms. We will dine al fresco and then, if Mlle. Gisele approves of the plan, we will attend the fete of Saint Cloud, at which, among other attractions, will be the great lion-tamer, the illustrious Bidel, with his menagerie. That is the proposition I have to offer."

"Bravo!" cried Gisele. "Your plan is charming! charming! Is it not, Robert?"

Accordingly the following day found Mme. de Balny, her daughter, and Robert at Saint Cloud as the guests of M. Langle and his mother. The day was spent in those delightful ways which people escaping from the city in the early summer find for passing the time in the country. Gisele, however, was all anticipation in regard to the approaching fete, and especially in regard to the lion-tamer, Bidel, of whose exploits she had heard a great deal. Immediately after dinner, therefore, Gisele, Robert and Langle went to the fete, the elder ladies preferring to remain at the cottage.

They first attended Bidel's performance with his lions, which Gisele watched with the liveliest interest. As the performance drew to a close, Gisele became so enthusiastic in regard to Bidel's bravery that Langle said jokingly that she ought to marry a lion-tamer.

"Such is my intention," replied Gisele, "for I am sure that Robert will not deny the first request I have ever made of him. Will you, Robert?" she added, turning to him.

"What!" exclaimed Robert. "Do you wish me to enter the lion's cage?"

"Yes. Does that surprise you?"

"A little, I confess."

"You ought to have as much courage as a vulgar tamer of animals," said Gisele, who seemed to be put out by her lover's backwardness in bearding the lions to please her whim.

"But to do what you ask me to do would by no means be a proof of courage," answered Robert. "It would be a ridiculous act on my part, for I would be exposing myself for no purpose."

"You speak lightly of the prospect of being devoured," said Langle laughing.

Langle wished to laugh Gisele out of her caprice. Gisele, on the other hand, did not really wish her lover to enter the lions' cage, but she wanted him to seem ready to do even that for her.

"Then you refuse?" she asked Robert with an air of disdain.

Langle, without giving Robert an opportunity to reply, said:

"Certainly he refuses, for the conditions are not the same for him as for Bidel, who has been long accustomed to being among wild animals and has made a careful study of their character."

"You seem to take great interest in a matter which does not concern you," said Gisele, who was vexed by Langle's opposition.

"But," replied Langle, gravely, "what you ask Robert to do is very dangerous. Besides, you forget that his mother adores him, and that she will never forgive you if you make him expose himself in this perilous manner."

But Gisele insisted.

"Very well," said Robert, coldly, "I will enter the cage if Bidel will allow me to do so as soon as the spectators have departed. I do not wish to give a public exhibition of my courage," he added, with a tinge of sarcasm in his tone.

"Ah! I knew you would consent!" exclaimed Gisele, with apparent delight.

"I will arrange the matter at once," said Robert.

He went to Bidel, with whom he held a short conversation, then returned, saying:

"The lions will be fed in a few minutes. I will enter the cage then with Bidel."

By this time the spectators had departed. Robert, Langle and Gisele approached the cage. Presently the lion-tamer joined them. He told Robert that he was ready to feed the lions, and invited him into the cage.

"No, Robert, do not go," said Gisele. "I do not wish you to enter the cage. I asked you to do so only because I wanted you to seem ready to expose yourself to any danger for my sake."

"Pardon me, Gisele, for not acceding to this new caprice of yours as to the first," replied Robert. "I have resolved to enter the cage and I shall do so."

Robert turned away from Gisele, and a moment afterward he and the lion-tamer entered the cage. The lions, eight in number, moved hither and thither obedient to the command of their master, but their large golden eyes showed their astonishment at the presence of this intruder who accompanied him.

Gisele and Langle looked on in silence and in agony. Gisele, who was very pale, was only prevented from giving voice to her anguish by the fear of aggravating her lover's peril. Her eyes, which were big with fright, were fixed on Robert. He, on the other hand, was quite calm, at least in appearances. Like Bidel, he was armed with a bar of iron and a rawhide. He was thus doubly prepared to repel the lions if they came too near him.

Robert was in the cage about five minutes. Then he left it and rejoined Gisele, who, radiant with joy, her hands extended, exclaimed:

"Oh, Robert! how I admire you! How I——"

"Do not praise my exploit so much, for the act which you applaud was performed for my own sake rather than yours."

As soon as they returned to the cottage the party started for Paris. When they reached Gisele's home Robert bade her good-by with a profound bow. On entering the house Gisele found the superb bouquet which she was accustomed to receive each day from Robert; it was the last. Gisele has never married.

George Augustus Sala.

George Augustus Sala, the well-known English writer, on his last Australian trip, wrote as follows to the London Daily Telegraph:

"I especially have a pleasant remembrance of the ship's doctor—a very experienced maritime medico indeed, who tended me most kindly during a horrible spell of bronchitis and spasmodic asthma, provoked by the sea fog which had swooped down on us just after we had left San Francisco. But the doctor's prescriptions and the increasing warmth of the temperature as we neared the Tropics, and, in particular, a couple of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS clapped on—one on the chest and another between the shoulder blades—soon set me right."

IT WAS A SLUGGING MATCH.

Heavy Batting Was the Feature of Yesterday's Championship Game.

Two Pitchers Batted Out of the Box and Two More Punished in Royal Style—The Willamettes Win, as Usual.

It is too bad that the Portlands fielded so wretchedly in their championship game with the Willamettes at the Riverside grounds yesterday. Had they handled the ball as well as they hammered it they would have won one of the most interesting games ever played in Portland.

It was a great slugging match and the cover was batted off the ball more than a score of times. The full record is three home runs, eight three-baggers, five two-baggers and eight singles. The slugging of the Portlands counted for a total of twenty-five bases and that of the Willamettes for twenty-two bases.

The Portlands turned to in the third inning and batted Tom Parrott out of the box. They seemed to be able to land the ball in any part of the field they selected. In the next inning Tom was sent to first base and his brother Jiggs did the twirling.

"Spoil his record, bat him as you batted the other one," said Vaughn, who was coaching, as McAndries stepped to the plate.

McAndries put his bat against the first ball delivered, and a great yell went up when it dropped in right field. It was good for three bases and McAndries made them. Barker followed with a two-bagger to left, scoring McAndries, and Garson made a single before the close of the inning. It was great fun for the Portlands.

In the fourth, fifth and seventh innings, the Willamettes had their fun and right royally did they serve Landis in the same way, and he was taken out of the position and Barker put in. Barker signalized his appearance by striking out Buchtel and Neale in succession, but G. Parrott, after two strikes had been called on him, landed a three-bagger in right field. Barker was hit freely during the remainder of the game.

More home runs were made than in any game played in Portland for a long time. McCarthy started the craze in the third inning. He hit the ball square on the end of the bat and drove it away into left field, and ran around the bases like a race horse. Bailey put the ball in the same place in the fifth, and Jiggs Parrott in the tenth, and each scored a home run.

The Portlands presented the game to the Willamettes in the most graceful manner possible in the fifth inning. The score was 7 to 1 in their favor, and they were not playing their best. The sun was shining squarely in McAndries's face when Kern's fly was descending, and he could not gauge the ball, and through his hands it slipped. Landis muffed Turnbull's little fly a moment later, and McGuire, to keep company with misery and disaster, dropped Morgan's long fly.

Three black errors in succession—that was horrible. The Willamettes piled up four runs after they were made.

Morgan's run in the eighth tied the score. Morgan lifted a fly that McGuire failed to hold, ran to second on a passed ball and scored on Halley's fumble of W. Parrott's bounder.

Neither club scored in the ninth. In the tenth with two men out and Morgan and Bailey on bases, Jiggs Parrott banged a long hit into center field and made a home run, beside scoring the other two. That settled the game. The Portlands did not score in their half. After Garson had been thrown out at first, Vaughn drove a three-bagger into left field but did not get a chance to make his run count before the side was retired.

The spectators were treated to a little fun at the expense of the East Portland boys in the seventh inning. McAndries, who was on second, started for home on a passed ball. He concluded his spurt by dropping and rolling all around the plate and kicking up a big cloud of dust. Jiggs Parrott, who had run up to the pan to close him out, claimed that McAndries had run out of the line to avoid being caught, and had never touched the plate and was, therefore, out.

Umpire Timmons declared McAndries safe, and, thereupon, all the Willamette players, except Tom Parrott, Neale and Buchtel, came in and argued the point with him. It was a great pow-wow. Jiggs told his story repeatedly with many a wild gesticulation, and the other Willamette players worked their sub-maxillaries without restraint. They gained nothing by their waste of wind, for Timmons would not budge an inch, and they resumed their places in the field amid the jeers of the crowd and cries of "Play ball." Jiggs's conduct, at times, was very improper and offensive to Timmons, and under the same circumstances, an Eastern umpire would have fined him or removed him from the field, or done both.

SUICIDE ON A TRAIN.

Information Wanted in Regard to Antonio Silvara Desimas, of Trout Creek, Or.

Mr. C. W. Johnson, superintendent of the O. R. & N. Co., received a dispatch yesterday from Mr. J. Barr, superintendent of the Union Pacific, at Cheyenne, stating that a man named Antonia Silvara Desimas committed suicide on train No. 2 at Wamsutta Saturday afternoon.

On his body was found a bill of sale for a horse from John Hughes to John Simons, dated at Trout Creek, Or., April 25, and was witnessed by David Walker and Ora Hamilton. It would appear from a scrap of paper on which Desimas had been practising writing that he had taken the name of John Simons.

Mr. Barr wishes to know whether Desimas, alias Simons, has any friends or relatives on Trout creek or elsewhere. The remains were turned over to the county authorities at Rawlins, Wyo. Any one desiring further information in this matter can apply at Superintendent Johnson's office.

MME. MODJESKA.

First Appearance in Portland of This Charming Actress in Two Shakespearean Plays.

Rarely does Portland have the opportunity of enjoying Shakespearean drama interpreted by genius, but on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week the opportunity will be given. Mme Modjeska, who is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as an artiste of phenomenal powers, equally at home in the works of the great masters and the lighter creations of the French school, supported by the strength of the Booth-Barrett company, will appear at the Exposition building in two of Shakespeare's most charming creations, namely, Rosalind in "As You Like It," and Beatrice in "Much Ado About Nothing."

Modjeska, it is almost needless to say, is to-day one of the leading exponents of the strictly legitimate school of acting on the boards. She is, besides, by right of birth, education and natural attributes, one of the brightest ornaments of the profession, and has everywhere most pronounced social recognition. Since we cannot have the divine bard's tragedies interpreted by the great Booth, as had been confidently expected, no more pleasing exchange could be given than to have Modjeska in the delightful roles of Rosalind and Beatrice.

The company is said to be a competent one, including among the list Lawrence Hanley, John A. Lane, Mrs. F. M. Bates and Imogene Eberle.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

T. B. Freeman Tells How Seattle Escaped a Conflagration in '73.

Inasmuch as the great Seattle fire is still the general topic of conversation, the fact that the Queen City of the sound narrowly escaped a conflagration in 1873, when she was proud to claim a population of but 5000, may not be without interest.

Thomas B. Freeman, who was then a resident of Seattle, vividly recalls the event, for, it was through him that the fire was averted.

"The fire originated in my store, opposite the Schwabacher building, on Commercial street," said Mr. Freeman. "I was engaged in the general merchandise business in what was then the heart of the city. I will recall the circumstances. It was a warm day in August, between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. I locked up my store at 3 o'clock to go to dinner to my home, about a mile distant. Coming back, when within two blocks of my store, I heard the whistles blowing. I looked down the street and saw smoke pouring from the building. I hurried as fast as I could, and, upon arriving at the scene, I saw that the entire interior of my store was ablaze. One of Schwabacher's clerks was the first to discover the fire. He stated that he first saw a blaze as small as a hand back of the counter and the next moment the fire shot across the opposite side of the store.

"I rushed to the back end of the building, but could not get in. I started to go in through the front door, but was repulsed twice by the fierce flames. I was bent on reaching the shelf where my powder can was standing, for I knew that if that once exploded the city would be as good as lost. By this time a bucket brigade had formed and water was being thrown on the fire with but little effect.

"The third time I tried to gain an entrance I fought my way through the flames and reached the shelf where the powder keg was located. I picked up an old tin bucket back of the counter, and in it placed the powder can. The paper on the can was ablaze and some of the solder had melted, but fortunately a bucket of water was dashed on me just as I was placing the keg in the bucket. This wet my clothes and put out the fire on the powder can. I then got out in safety, though my hands were considerably burned. For that act the citizens made up a purse of $300 or $400 and presented it to me, claiming that I had saved the city from destruction. There is no doubt, but what the entire town would have burned, if the powder had exploded. The buildings were all frame, standing close together, and there was no fire department to contend with the flames. My loss was between $2000 and $3000, with not a cent of insurance. A fire department, of which I was a member, was then organized."

PORTLAND'S POLITICAL POT.

As Yet the Cauldron Doesn't "Simmer" Worth a Cent—The Probable Candidates.

One week from to-day is election day, when three councilmen and a police commissioner are to be elected. For all that is seen or heard about the election it might be a year off, instead of a week; but all the same there is being a great amount of figuring going on among the "bosses," of whom there are several.

The primaries will probably be put off until the last minute, as usual, for reasons which are always obvious. Just who are to be candidates for councilmen is not known, but it is quite certain that in the First ward Mr. Gerdes, who has had nine years in the council, is earnestly seeking re-election. He has become a sort of professional councilman and imagines that the city's affairs can not be run properly without he has a hand in them. Mr. Gerdes, however, stands no show of re-election. He spoiled his chances a short time since in fooling with electing a new supervisor of streets, and as a prominent member of his party says, "sold himself cheap."

A number of citizens in the Second ward are anxious to have R. H. Schwab re-elected. He makes no sign, but is not likely to refuse the office if elected to it, which he probably will be. He has been on the right side more often than on the wrong, which is doing pretty well for a Portland councilman.

Councilman Woodward has given notice that he is not seeking re-election in the Third ward, but his seems to be a case where the office seeks the man, for there is a very general desire among the citizens of his ward that he shall be their candidate, and if he is he will certainly be elected.

As to the police commissioners, no one knows who will be the candidate, or whether if he is elected he will be able to get a seat. The present board think they are permanent, under the provisions of the "fixed" charter; but whether they will be allowed to hold their seats down during the remainder of their lives or not, remains to be seen.

THE GLACIER HOTEL.

How the Work is Progressing on the Mt. Hood Summer Resort.

The following paragraphs from the Hood River Glacier shows how work is progressing on the Summit hotel, at Eliot glacier, Mt. Hood, and on the road to that place:

On Thursday last Mr. William M. Ladd and Mr. C. E. S. Wood, accompanied by Mr. Whidden, the architect of the hotel, went on to the glaciers behind one of Olinger & Bone's fine teams. They marked off the foundation for the building, and surveyed a line for the waterpipes which will start from an ice cold spring just below the glaciers. They instructed their foreman to have the building done by July 1, no matter what the cost might be, and it is safe to bet the work will be done.

Messrs. Ladd & Wood on their recent visit instructed their foreman to hire every available team in the valley to work in getting material on the ground for the hotel and in improving and beautifying the grounds. The hotel will be finished and ready to receive guests by July 1, but it will make everybody hustle to accomplish it.

The horses for the Mt. Hood stage line arrived here last Sunday and were taken to their stations along the line by Mr. S. H. Adams, who has charge of the line.

When the Ladd party were coming in from the glaciers last week they ran across a big deer in the road, which was too fat and lazy to get frightened, and, after a few leaps, stopped and took a good look at the invaders of his country.

About twenty men are putting the hewed logs of the Glacier hotel in place.

Joseph Wilson left yesterday for the Elk beds, about five miles this side of the summit, to survey a lot of pasture land for the Mt. Hood Stage Company.

KILLING OF CHAS. BALCOM.

Pennington and Ham Both Indicted for Murder in the First Degree.

An "Oregonian" Correspondent Furnishes the Particulars of the Tragedy—The Defendants Plead Not Guilty.

THE OREGONIAN'S Baker City correspondent, writing under date of June 6, sends the following particulars of the killing of Charles Balcom:

Your correspondent had an interview with the principal witness of the killing of Charles Balcom by Clinton Pennington and Robert Ham this morning, from whom the following facts are gleaned:

Charles Balcom and wife came to Baker county from Chadron, Nebraska, in the fall of 1888, and rented a place near Rye valley, in the southern portion of this county. Balcome and Pennington were old friends in Nebraska, and, after Balcom and wife had established themselves in Oregon, a correspondence soon sprang up between the deceased and his murderer, which culminated in Pennington's arrival with his friend Ham at the home of Balcom about six weeks ago.

Pennington became dissatisfied with the country, and accused Balcom at various times during his stay at the latter's house of misrepresenting the country, and, on the morning of the shooting, while the parties were at breakfast, Pennington again referred to these misrepresentations which led to a quarrel, whereupon Pennington, in the presence of Mrs. Balcom, drew a thirty-eight-caliber Smith and Wesson revolver from his pocket, pointed it at Balcom, and threatened to shoot. Balcom's wife stepped in between her husband and his assailant, when further hostilities ceased.

Balcom then warned Pennington and his friend Ham to leave his premises during the day, and he (Balcom) went to a neighbor's (John Poor). After conversing with Mr. Poor for about one hour, Pennington and Ham came in, when the quarrel was renewed. Pennington again pointed his gun at Balcom, and demanded that Balcom consider himself under arrest. At this, Mr. Poor asked Pennington for his authority for making such an arrest, whereupon Pennington displayed a badge of Gammon's detective bureau and a certificate of membership as a detective.

Mr. Poor said: "You cannot arrest the man in my house without a warrant," and ordered the trio outside the door, which he locked, Pennington keeping Balcom covered all this time with his revolver. When fairly outside, Pennington again demanded the surrender of Balcom, and said: "If you don't give yourself up, I will shoot you." Balcom replied: "Here is a good full breast to shoot at;" whereupon, Pennington took deliberate aim and fired, the ball passing entirely through the heart. Balcom turned partially around, when Pennington shot a second time, striking his unfortunate victim in the back. As he fell he looked in the direction of his home and gasped, "Wife, wife!" and expired.

Pennington then turned to his companion Ham and said, "Let's tie his hands." The two men then started in the direction of Balcom's house, whither Mr. Poor had preceded them and met the wife of the murdered man on the way to the scene of the homicide. They told her it was no use to go further as her husband was dead. They then tried to persuade a neighbor to take them to Huntington, where they said they would give themselves up; but the party to whom they applied would not allow them the use of a team. Accordingly they started on foot and were overtaken and arrested near Huntington, where they made a statement before Justice Locke and were committed to the county jail at this place, without bail, to await the action of the grand jury, which found an indictment against them for murder in the first degree, as reported in the telegraphic columns of THE OREGONIAN of the 4th inst.

This murder is the principal topic of conversation upon our streets, and the universal verdict seems to be that the assault was unprovoked, as the murdered man had no weapon upon his person. The story told by Pennington and Ham of an assault with a knife by Balcom is not true. There is no feeling of sympathy for Pennington, and when the poor old heart-broken mother of Balcom visited him in the jail yesterday and asked, with tears in her eyes, and a form bowed down with grief, "Are you the man who murdered my boy," Pennington answered without the least emotion and a fiendish smile played on his hardened face, "I am." The old lady then said, between her bitter sobs, "Oh! how could you do it; had he ever done you any harm?" and the smile broadened into a grin as he answered, "He had." "What harm?" asked the old lady. "I decline to answer," said Pennington, as he turned his back upon the grief-stricken mother of the murdered man.

There is a mystery connected with this murder that is expected to develop into one of the most sensational and interesting trials that our courts have ever held. The full and complete testimony will be furnished THE OREGONIAN as the trial progresses. As there is a very heavy docket the case will probably be set for trial some time next week.

Pennington and Ham were brought into court this morning to plead to the indictment of murder in the first degree for the killing of Charles Balcom. They pleaded not guilty.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE.

For quick raising, the Royal Baking Powder is superior to all other leavening agents. It is absolutely pure and wholesome and of the highest leavening power. It is always uniform in strength and quality and never fails to make light, sweet, most palatable and nutritive food. Bread, biscuits, muffins, cake, etc., raised with Royal Baking Powder may be eaten hot without distressing results to the most delicate digestive organs. It will keep in any climate without deterioration.

Prof. H. A. Mott, U. S. Government Chemist, after examining officially the principal baking powders of the country, reported:

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the United States Government.

"Because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.

-DON'T-
TELL IT TO ME!

But I want to keep cool, and how to do it is the question, and it don't pay to shop around these hot days for light clothes, so I'll go straight to Kohn's and get suited from the start. That's about the language we hear every day. And that's the way for people to do. Sensible people go straight to Kohn's for their clothing, because he has three times more stock in his store than any other store in Portland. Notwithstanding all our competitors' blowing,

WE LAY THEM ALL IN THE SHADE

Our big four stores, 75x100 feet, the largest clothing store west of Chicago, and there are but about six larger ones in the United States. Kohn does undersell all his Portland competitors by about 10 to 20 per cent daily. If you want honest clothing bargains at one price, come and see
